College picks up three Colby High star baseball players

Colby High baseball coach Kevin Cox said the players will all have to learn how to take the ball to the opposite field, be more selective at the plate, improve their speed and develop quicker bats in order to hit the faster pitching they will face at the college level.

Carter said the biggest adjustment players have to make when making the transition from high school to college baseball is how much faster the game is at the college level. He said players should get in really good shape before the start of the season.

"The body can break down when playing day in and day out," said Carter.

All three students will be playing with the Colby Eagles at the 4A Kansas State High School Baseball Tournament Friday and Saturday in Salina. For more details, see Page 6.

Library offers fun for all ages this summer

will present a concert at 8 p.m. on June 16, outside the library on the lawn.

Schnitzer is a well known singer, songwriter, guitarist and teacher who specializes in music for children and families. Her instruments range from guitar, electric and acoustic, to harmonica, kazoo, ukulele, percussion and maybe even a kitchen item or two. She promises to be energetic and entertaining said Children's Librarian Judy Kleinsorge.

On June 25, Suzanne Lively, story teller and balloon artist will entertain at the library at 10:30 a.m. and again at 1:30 p.m. Tickets are required, and are free at the front desk after May 28.

Oscars and Emmys will be at 10:30 a.m. on July 9. This is the project where local youth will write and present a Reader's Theater program, and promises to be amusing and entertaining.

"Standing Room Only" will wind up the summer activities, and is scheduled for 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. on July 23. It will be for all the youngsters who have achieved a "blackout" in the Imagination Station reading game by July 20.

The summer reading program is made possible through donations of Friends of the Pioneer Memorial Library.

Hospital to hold picnic and community meeting

Citizens Medical Center, Inc. will hold a community meeting at 5 p.m. Thursday, June 11. Supper will be served. Everyone is welcome to attend at the southwest corner of the Citizens Medical Center campus in Colby. For more information, contact call the hospital's community relations office at 460-1214.

Interest groups engaged in nominee battle

JULIE HIRSCHFELD DAVIS
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battle is on between conservative and liberal interest groups to define little-known federal judge Sonia Sotomayor before senators — away from the capital on a weeklong break — return to weigh in on the fate of the woman who would be the Supreme Court's first Hispanic.

Republican senators are speaking in cautious but measured tones about Sotomayor's qualifications and fitness for the court while Democrats are joining the White House in singing her praises. But the outside organizations that have a major stake in a high-court fight are taking up warring positions.

Conservative groups brand her an activist who would impose her own views and ethnic and gender biases on her interpretation of the law and the Constitution.

"Equal justice under law — or under attack?" a Web ad by the conservative group Judicial Confirmation Network asks. "America deserves better" than Sotomayor, it concludes.

Liberal groups hit back with their own campaign to paint Sotomayor as an experienced and fair judge whose background gives her a better understanding of how the court affects people and lives.

"Principled. Fair-minded. Independent," asserts a TV spot by the liberal Center for Constitutional Values.

The noise drowned out a more nuanced and politically sensitive discussion to come on just how far Republicans will want to go in opposing Sotomayor. Sen. Jeff Sessions of Alabama, the senior Republican on the Judiciary Committee, said he doesn't foresee a filibuster to block a vote on Sotomayor, and Democrats appear to have more than enough votes to confirm her.

Nevertheless, Democrats, signaling that they intend to score political points against Republicans in the debate over Sotomayor's nomination, e-mailed contributors telling them that the GOP was "ready to obstruct." Sen. Robert Menendez, D-N.J., the head of the party's Senate campaign committee, wrote that "we have a fight on our hands" over Sotomayor's nomination.

The judge's Capitol Hill debut could come as early as next week, when top aides said she could begin making personal "courtesy calls" to Senate leaders and members of the Judiciary Committee. For now, with many of the senators scattered in home-states across the country or destinations around the world during their weeklong congressional break, there's little public partisan debate about Sotomayor's nomination.

In private, the 54-year-old Sotomayor — a veteran of the federal bench who was reared in Bronx housing projects and attended Princeton and Yale en route to the highest echelons of the legal profession — phoned key senators as she began preparing to face them in high-stakes hearings. Since President Barack Obama announced her nomination Tuesday, she has spoken with Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., and GOP leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, as well as Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., the Judiciary chairman, and Sessions.

Staffers on the Judiciary panel, which will run hearings on Sotomayor's nomination, huddled researching her record and released a detailed, 10-page questionnaire the judge will have to answer in advance of the public session she will undergo with senators. Democratic aides on the panel planned to meet Thursday with Cynthia Hogan, Vice President Joe Biden's counsel, to plot strategy.

The questionnaire asks Sotomayor to divulge personal, financial and employment information and to provide copies of all her writings, speeches, interviews and opinions. She also has to list any potential conflicts of interest and describe how she would resolve them and reveal details about her nomination, including whether she was asked by anyone how she would rule on any potential Supreme Court case or issue and how she responded.

Meanwhile, the White House is continuing the careful packaging of Sotomayor that officials set in motion with the announcement of her selection. They arranged a conference call Wednesday with six legal experts and attorneys who are Sotomayor boosters to rebut charges that she would bring a personal agenda to the court or strive to use rulings to make policy.

"Judge Sotomayor is not the kind of judge who thinks it is her job to fix every social ill in the world," said Kevin Russell, a lawyer who has argued before her.

Conservatives pointed with particular concern to a 2001 speech Sotomayor made at the University of California at Berkeley Law School in which she said, "Our experiences as women and people of color affect our decisions."

In discussing discrimination cases, Sotomayor also referred to a remark at times attributed to former Justice Sandra Day O'Connor that "a wise old man and a wise old woman reach the same conclusion" and said that she didn't necessarily agree.

"First, as Professor Martha Minow has noted, there can never be a universal definition of wise," Sotomayor said. "Second, I would hope that a wise Latina woman with the richness of her experiences would... reach a better conclusion than a white male who hasn't lived that life."

Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., suggested Sotomayor was a racist, writing in a blog posting: "Imagine a judicial nominee said 'my experience as a white man makes me better than a Latina woman.' Wouldn't they have to withdraw? New racism is no better than old racism. A white man racist nominee would be forced to withdraw. Latina woman racist should also withdraw."

At the White House, spokesman Robert Gibbs labored to answer questions about Sotomayor's statement, resorting to admonishing reporters not to pluck one remark out of a larger speech and an extensive record of rulings and writings.
