"officer assist" if there is an occasion where the service needs to use a police officer to assist in loading a patient. She said the technicians get $26 for the whole run and an officer gets $25 just for helping to load someone in the ambulance.

Umberger said she also had to buy a new computer, as she had been using her personal computer which was at the point of crashing, and the department needed a computer. She purchased a laptop for just over $532, and will use it strictly for the Emergency Medical Service.

Emergency Preparedness Director Susan McMahan told County Commissioners Thomas County is one of 18 counties in northwest

Kansas that still has an analog to tell them his office had found "yes" vote 937 and the total "no" radio. The state is mandating up- a replacement desk for the bookdates, and the costs are staggering.

"We can go to narrow-banding to bring us up to code by 2012," she said, "with another update by 2018. The city is putting funds aside now to prepare for the change by 2012."

She said Reno County recently switched their radios at a cost of $6.8 million.

"Radios are not cheap," Mc-Mahan said, "but with the narrow banding, we should be able to get by for around $10,000 or a little under. But depending on how far the radios reach, that figure does not include repeaters, if they are necessary."

Undersheriff Mark Finley appeared before the commissioners allowed for 47, making the total ing room. The old one is literally falling apart, he said, and it takes a special size to fit the tiny room. The cost of the new one is $800, and his department has the money to do it. The commissioners approved the request.

Facing budget crunch, county delays software cost

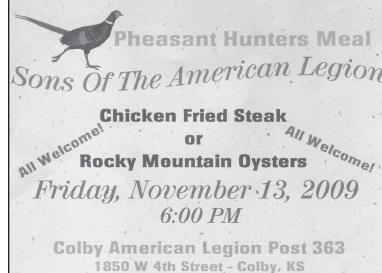

After no one appeared at the public hearing for a request to vacate Block 6, Lots 1-30 and adjacent alley in Gem, the commissioners denied the request, and turned the request over to the city of Gem, on the advice of County Attorney Bruce Flipse.

In other business the commissioners:

• Canvassed last Tuesday's sales tax vote. There were 50 provisional ballots. They rejected three and vote 324.

• Toured the courthouse basement to look at the boiler that is Kansas. ready for replacement hour shift.

"Principal Lance Kranawitter manned the drive-through nearly the whole time, and was really good at it," said Pam Geihsler, president of the Parent Teacher Organization, whose members were there to help take receipts and hand out prizes to kids.

Geihsler said 332 customer transactions were counted.

The school will be able to collect points throughout November, and anyone eating at McDonalds can save their receipts and turn them in to the school, or give them to a student of the school to help the points to add up.

ticipate in the program one night each semester.

And to make it even better, on the night a school works the restaurant, the point values are tripled. Schools have a variety of supplies to choose from, including art supplies, music, books, electronics, playground equipment, math, life skills, science, the list goes on.

"Schools can bank their points until they are ready to order," Rupp said.
