Family dairy marks 10 years in Thomas County

"Our main feeder has been with us for seven years," he said, "and I just don't know what we'd do without them."

Clay says he does all the "heat" checks, to see when the cows are ready to breed at both dairies, plus he does the artificial insemination and the ultrasound pregnancy checks.

But dairying is more than milking cows. It is raising baby calves, making sure feed stocks are plentiful, staying in compliance with state Water Board regulations on water cows' bedding is cleaned so that they are as comfortable and clean as possible.

It's fighting with the mud and gunk in a year with lots of rain, pulling every load of silage to the silo because of the mud, and last but not least, it's hauling tons and tons of manure to be spread over the fields to be used as fertilizer. Running a dairy is all these things and more. It's hard work, long hours and it's 365 days a year.

tal standards and cleaning barns, equipment matic cleaning operation. The area behind and alleyways. It is even making sure the where the cows eat is engineered so a valve can be opened and the whole area washed. The water goes into holding lagoons beyond the barns, and then is recycled and used to clean again, or pumped onto fields to water and fertilize the corn grown as feed.

"We can raise a full corn crop on lagoon water, and the field we're pumping on now hasn't had any commercial fertilizer in four years," Clay said. "This is truly production agriculture where we can generate more Even cows in the 800-foot-by-190-foot dollars through the economy without being use, meeting and maintaining environmen- open free-stall pens are treated to an auto- water intensive, because we reclaim our water."

> Fresh water needs for drinking and cleaning total about 150 thousand gallons every 24 hours, he said.

> "What it boils down to is good people," Clay said, looking out over the equipment and heifer yard. "We have great employees, a great banker and great neighbors. These people all care.

> "The dairy business is tough, but I think we're here to stay."

Moore's departure leaves uncertain race

sidered the safest of the two for Republicans.

Tiahrt's district could be a bit dicy for the party. Several legislators are running for the seat, and said Democrats and voters have the winner faces a Democratic legislator who has shown the ability to raise money.

Rep. Raj Goyle, a Wichita Democrat serving in the Kansas House, reported raising more than $400,000 in the most recent campaign finance reporting period.

Washburn University political scientist Bob Beatty said the kind of turnover that Kansas is likely to see in 2010 is cyclical, and could prove to bring out record numbers of candidates, especially Republicans who are looking ahead to long careers at the next level.

"This year might be one for the ages in terms of Republican candidates," Beatty said. "There will be numerous candidates, and it makes sense. If you win the primary in those three districts, you stand a chance of being there a while."

At least six candidates were either in the race or giving it serious consideration less than 24 hours after Moore's announcement. They include former state Sen. Nick Jordan, who Moore beat in 2008; House Appropriations Committee Chairman Kevin Yoder; Rep. Pat Colloton of Leawood; and Sen. Jeff Colyer of Overland Park.

Adler said a lot of pundits are looking at 2010 and seeing similarities to 1994, when Republicans took control of Congress, handing President Bill Clinton a defeat in his first midterm election. Adler learned since then, however.

"History is not a wind at our back," she said. "No one knew what a (Republican) majority would look like then, what they would push for and what they would bring the country,

"We now know what that would look like and what policies they would push. People don't want to take the country in that direction."

Erickson said he sees the economy and health care as the issues likely to dominate congressional races, and he thinks voters will be looking for a change.

'Voters want to see more jobs and a focus on the economy. We've spent four months looking at health care, but we still see unemployment at 26-year highs," Erickson said. "Now they are talking about another jobs bill, which is an admission that the stimulus package didn't work."

Adler disagrees, saying she sees the economy turning around and working in Democrats' favor.

"This is a district that is trending," Adler said. "Someone who is similar to Kansas voters and will represent their voices in Congress can represent the district."

Farm Service agency gives out $147 million in loans to Kansans

The U.S. Farm Service Agency provided $147.7 to youth applicants. million in direct and guaranteed loans to 1,288 family farmers in Kansas during fiscal year 2009, which ended Oct. 31.

"This has been a record setting year for number of loans made and dollars loaned," said Adrian J. Polansky, state executive director. "Some of this year's money was made available through the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 to stimulate rural economies."

The agency processed 931 loans totaling $88.5 million, he said. These loans helped Kansas farmers plant and harvest crops, buy livestock and machinery or reorganize their business. Of those, $4.4 million went to socially disadvantaged applicants, $23.2 million to beginning farmers and $335,956

To buy or improve real estate or reorganize the farm business, the agency processed 349 loans totaling $58.4 million. To help producers recover from losses due to natural disasters, the agency approved eight emergency loans.

The agency makes loans to purchase and operate family-size farms. Money can be used to finance livestock, farm equipment, annual operating expenses and most other farm expenses. Interest rates vary from 1.5 to 4.875 percent, depending on loan type.

Applicants must meet eligibility requirements outlined on the website at www.fsa.usda.gov. For questions or to make an appointment, call the agency's Thomas County office at 462-7671.
