The album cover for "Sounds of Home" was shot at Inlow Interiors in Colby. The McLemores finished the album over the summer and are now making it available outside of festivals.

just in time for Pickin' on the Plains, Colby's bluegrass festival, but has only been available at a couple of events since then.

The title, "Sounds of Home," grew out of the long time that the brothers recently spent away from home, both going to schools far away from Colby.

"We realized how much we had taken the family music for granted," he said. "It was a way to celebrate being back together."

The band hasn't recorded an album since 2001, and in that time, Blake has gone to Kansas State University to study agriculture and completed an internship in Great Bend, while Brandon spent his time in Arizona and Tennessee.

"The first one was recorded when Blake and I were freshmen in high school," Brandon said.

The brothers are now a little closer to home. Blake is in Colby again, working at the U.S. Department of Agriculture office and Brandon is studying marketing at Fort Hays State University.

The album is available at the Prairie Museum of Art and History and Inlow Interiors. The McLemores are also available for performances. They can be reached at 460-3474 or 443-3042.

Chicken suit causes big flap

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — A person in a chicken costume ruffled the feathers of Durango's city council as its members discussed rules for backyard fowl.

At a council meeting last week, someone in a chicken costume quietly entered the council chambers just as the mayor was discussing a recently passed backyard hen ordinance.

The costumed chicken took a few turns, flapped its arms, then took a seat in the nearly empty gallery.

Several minutes later, the big bird left — without identifying itself — after laying an egg on the floor.

needs to be addressed before the project is finished. The approval of the standard completion didn't include the council allocating any more money for the project.

• Heard the Colby municipal airport board was negotiating a contract with HWS Consulting Group based in Manhattan. The business will be helping the airport with the land acquisition that has to take place before the airport can expand its runway. The companies Kirkham Michaels and Midway Right of Way Services, both based in Nebraska, were interested in doing the project in a joint effort, but the board chose to work with the Manhattan-based business instead.

Airport manager Mark Ostmeier said the board had a good working relationship with HWS. He said they had previously worked with the company on runway, taxi-way and apron rehabilitation projects and environmental assessments. The board also preferred to only work for one group, said Ostmeier.

"It was a tough decision to make," he said.

Armstrong said the board would present the contract to the city in January and the council would decide whether to accept or reject the contract.

KU head coach resigns amid probe

Southern Mississippi.

"I'd like to have it done today," Perkins said. "We just have to work very hard and try to get it done. We've got good people who are going to help me."

Since the probe became public, many former players had come forward with stories of mean-spirited remarks they said Mangino had made to them, often in front of others. But there were also former and current players who came to the defense of the coach, insisting he had only wanted to make them better athletes and better men.

Mangino had been defiant to the end, insisting after a last-second loss to Missouri on Saturday that he had done nothing wrong and intended to serve out his contract.

He leaves with a record of 50-48, two victories shy of A.R. Kennedy's school record set in the early 1900s.

After winning their first five games this season and rising to No. 16 in the rankings, the Jayhawks were favored by many to win the Big 12 North.

But instead they failed to win another game, finishing the 5-7 season with a 41-39 loss to Missouri in the closing seconds. That final defeat kept them from becoming bowl eligible for what would have been a school-record third straight year.
