thing the students learned could be applied in the city-state project.

The models had to make visible many characteristics of the city-state, including when and where they existed, the religion practiced, what kind of government each has and the symbol of the government.

Students also had to diagram the social class structure of their city-states, create a structure that outlined its dimensions, layout and geography and describe the economy, including what economic staple the people living there rely on for their survival.

Williams said students created models based in the past, present and future. He said there were models set in medieval times, in Old West towns and during the Golden Age of Athens.

The teacher said many students made farming the economic staple for their city-state because it was something they were familiar with, but some picked examples that were really creative.

Both Karlton Leiker and Josh Shroeder used a fish pump to include streams and lakes in their citystates. Williams said Kai Coomer did a city-state that featured large and small pop cans to show the different sizes of the houses.

Emily Finlea's city-state revolved around the Harry Potter book series and Kaylee Keck's economy depended on a place where athletes trained. Another student designed a city-state where the economy hinged on Santa Claus exporting presents and importing the food he couldn't eat on Christmas.

The two most popular governments students chose were democracies and monarchies, said Williams.

check cases as "insufficient fund checks" rather than criminal summons.

Steve Haynes, publisher of the Colby Free Press, said the paper resumed printing police blotter items earlier this year. The blotters list all calls logged by the dispatch office for both the sheriff's office and the Colby police.

"The paper had given up publishing the police blotter some time ago," he said, "but last year, we decided that the blotter is news about what is going on in the community, something people need to know."

He said publishing police items is part of the newspaper's job, just as making arrests and serving summonses is part of the sheriff's job.

Sheriff Taylor said he has not received any complaints about what is published in the paper, just about the wording.

of the tanker, which was not on fire. However, they soon learned it was "sodium chloride," or common table salt. Firemen got permission to move in and attack the blaze.

McLemore said the hazmat gear was not needed since the tanker was hauling a saltwater solution used to treat roads in icy weather, none of which spilled.

The chief said fire fighters got the flames under control using foam, which blankets the burning area, preventing oxygen from getting to the fuel. The department then used two inch-and-a-half water hoses to cool the vehicles.

Officers shut down the westbound lanes at the Country Club exit, directing traffic down to Horton Avenue and over to Range, thia Cahalan, 5, all from Copperas where drivers could get back on Cove, Texas

WEST NEWTON, Pa. (AP) burgh.

Someone mailed an envelope filled with money to a western Pennsylvania bank that was robbed earlier this month, and the FBI suspects it was either the repentant robber or an acquaintance of his.

Special Agent Jeff Killeen says the returned money doesn't cancel out the crime, which was committed Dec. 9 at the PNC Bank lives in the area, because he was in West Newton, a tiny borough wearing a yellow Pittsburgh Steelabout 20 miles southeast of Pitts- ers T-shirt.

the freeway. After Colby Police arrived, the send cars trapped west of the exit up the "on" ramp to Country Club.

Both Keely and Brandon Trusell were pronounced dead about 3:11 a.m., after the wrecked had cooled enough to get to them. Both had been wearing seat belts, Honas reported.

The driver of the truck, Richard Taff, 46, of Weld, Colo., was not injured.

McLemore said he never made it to the truck accident himself, but went with a crew to the second just east of town.

The patrol reported that at 9:40, Alan Covell, 34, was driving a 2005 Dodge pickup westbound on I-70 went he also lost control. With him were Cathleen Covell, 28; Brandon Covell, 4; and Cyncrossed the median into the eastside, then struck a 2008 Ford sport utility head-on.
