prefer a moderate, centrist government led by bipartisan coalitions – like the one that increased the state sales tax last year to prevent further cuts in aid to public say, 'We need consistent and conschools and to social services.

"I think Kansas voters by and large have seen it is important to and community leaders would have a balance of power between the parties," said Senate Minority Leader Anthony Hensley, a Topeka Democrat. "There's been a moderate coalition basically running the Legislature and the governor's office.'

state government significantly to the right. Voters gave Kansas a new secretary of state, Kris Kobach, a law professor on leave who helped draft Arizona's latest, much-debated law against illegal immigration, and a new attorney general, Derek Schmidt, who's promised to get Kansas involved in litigation against last year's federal health care law.

Republicans also picked up 16 seats in the Kansas House, increasing their majority to 92 seats, compared to only 33 for Democrats. Those results left antitax, antiabortion conservatives firmly in control, shattering the coalition that passed last year's sales tax increase. The GOP also has a 32-8 majority in the Senate, thanks to a party switch by one member last in Kansas," said outgoing U.S. month.

But Ashley McMillan, the state GOP's executive director, said Republicans need success in several elections for consistent policies favoring lower taxes, smaller government and economic growth to take root long-term. The party also wants to build even stronger ties with business leaders in communities, so that they're active in the party and help it develop policy.

islating portion and the seeinglong-term portion, and hopefully we can help with that," McMillan said. "It's essentially that you look for a 10-year span of time, and servative leadership."

Republican party planning

Quarterly forums with business give elected officials information and ideas they need to govern, while giving the other participants a stake in the GOP, McMillan said. Having a "farm team" would deepen the GOP's political bench. The plan calls for boosting to-

Last year's election moved tal GOP voter registration by 5 percent by 2012, adding nearly 33,000 new Republicans to the rolls. It also calls for having a candidate in 2012 in every state House and Senate district. In 2008, the last time all legislative seats were on the ballot, Republicans had no candidates in two of 40 Senate districts and 21 of 125 House districts.

Also, the plan includes a goal of GOP's plan. increasing the GOP's majority to 98-27 in the House and 34-6 in the Senate in the 2012 elections.

Other Republicans who want to build the party see its future in making sure that tea party movement participants who voted for GOP candidates last year become active Republicans.

"We have a lot of active people Rep. Todd Tiahrt, who's asking fellow Republicans to elect him to the party's national committee. "I just think the Republican Party is the natural place for them."

One of Tiahrt's rivals for the Republican National Committee seat, longtime conservative activist Kris Van Meteren, also sees tea party adherents as crucial, noting that many of them became disillusioned with the GOP first, before they became upset with President

"The difficult part is the leg- Barack Obama and his fellow Democrats.

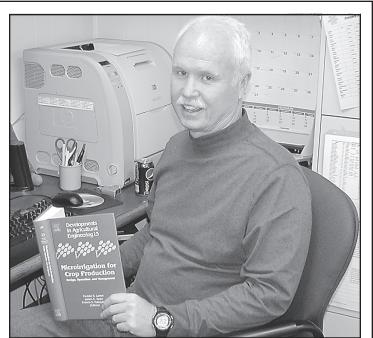

> "I see a real potential threat looming on the horizon, and that would be the emergence of the third party that comes out of the tea party movement," Van Meteren said, adding that the goal policies is in line with tea party ideas. She said tea party adherents already are influential within the party.

"This is for them," she added.

Key Democrats believe such efforts will falter because they expect the state's political mood to change over time. They anticipate Republicans will fight in the future as they have in the past over social issues such as abortion - which aren't mentioned in the

"I am firmly convinced that the Republicans will over-reach," said House Minority Leader Paul Davis, a Lawrence Democrat. "The public is simply not going to go for a one-party state.'

Area's state senator to take over committee

Kansas, he said, such as wildlife, parks and especially water.

"I got water issues out here

The committee was pretty quiet in favor of the increase to help schools, which were losing state money and already suffering from drops in enrollment.

"People were in my face," he said. "They wanted to know how long I was going to just say no and what I was going to do for them. I would be to make the GOP home for tea partiers. The state GOP's plan doesn't mention the tea party by name, but McMillan noted that the ultimate aim of promoting and sustaining anti-tax and small-government converting the store from Kabredlo's to Casey's. That time, Barrett are issues coming up such as shutsaid, the burglar successfully broke one of the glass doors at the front of the building and took cigarettes and lighters. Casey's installed the camera after the break in.

Colby police have used surveillance cameras in several other recent cases, such as the theft of nativity scene cutouts in December 2009, and the cemetery vandalism case last summer, where a sport utility vehicle was caught exiting the cemetery in the dead of night several days later. Barrett said the cameras lose some of their effectiveness at night because there is not enough light to make out much detail.

last year, Ostmeyer said, but there ting down wells. Unfortunately, he said, there won't be much money to work with.

The state budget crisis will take up a lot of the Senate's time. Ostmeyer said he hopes to avoid any more large cuts to education.

"Education is a big industry in western Kansas," he said. "We've made so many cuts out here already. Time will tell."

Ostmeyer voted in favor of last year's sales tax increase, something he said put him on the outs with some of the more conservative state senators. Ostmeyer said that when he toured the district, new people and figure out where many people asked him to vote they stand.

Ostmeyer said he hopes the economy will improve so that the legislature can eventually get rid of the tax increase without harming schools.

Ostmeyer was also picked for the redistricting committee, which will look at population numbers and redraw legislative district boundaries. In the 2010 session, he was chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

He said he will head to Topeka for the swearing-in ceremony Jan. 10. There will be a lot of new faces after last year's election. Ostmeyer said he'll have to meet the
