Morrison honored by House

mansion, Mrs. Morrison said, the tours stopped, and she isn't sure they ever started up again.

"Jim was always for transparency of government," his wife said, "and he was instrumental in finally getting a room equipped with sight and sound so visitors could watch committee meetings."

She added that the Legislature now has several rooms equipped to allow public access to what is going on in the committees.

Mrs. Morrison recalled the couple's trips back and forth to Topeka.

"We had two dogs and a cat who couldn't be left behind," she said. "First we would load the computers and cameras, then the animals, and if there was room, we brought medicine and a few clothes."

"One time Jim called me on the cell phone and told me I'd have to stay awake, because I was doing some weaving. I had to explain that I had the cat in my vehicle and was just trying to keep it from wanting to ride on my head!"

"We finally got a bigger vehicle and could get everything and everyone in it, and it was much easier then."

She says it's hard getting along without her life-long friend, but she'll keep busy when nicer weather gets here. She said she has two dogs, an amazing "invisible" cat that comes out only when she's there, and her grandchildren, who are the delight of her heart.

She's also a pretty fair gardener, and says she's content to stay in the family's house in Colby, which has been home for a long time.
