Gracemary Melvin was given an honorary associate degree. Melvin taught at the college and served as dean of instruction. She lives in Hays with her brother, and several of her 11 grandchildren came to graduation to see her awarded the degree.

"I'm not going to say a lot, but this group of kids is awesome," he said.

Colby High School had 13 valedictorians - students with 4.0 grade averages – Brittany Bange, Amanda Barnum, Megan Dougherty, Kayla Hockersmith, Laura Juenemann, Katrina Kaus, Sam Kendrick, Bailey Koerperich, Sara Martin, Tera Raymond, Shanell Sager, Ana Taylor and Shelby Terrell. The school also had three salutatorians - students who got only one B – Audra Fleming, Katherine Kaus and Matt Lambert.

The students had a multi-part speech, with each one talking childhood or school. Some spoke about the class' accomplishments in activities such as music and forensics while others talked about the challenges they've faced, such as having to adjust to three different principals. Sam Kendrick closed the speech by congratulating the class and introducing their guest speaker, football coach Chris Gardner.

Gardner, a Chadron (Neb.) State College graduate, also teaches seventh grade social studies at Colby Middle School. Gardner said he started teaching in Colby when the class of 2011 was in eighth grade, and although he never taught them directly, he still has a lot of memories of them such as dress-up days and the cemetery repair project.

Gardner ended his speech with a quote from cartoonist Charles Shultz, "The people who make a difference in your life are not the ones with the most credentials, the most money, or the most awards. They are the ones that care."

Lawmakers use unusual tactics on abortion bill

from automatically covering abortions in their health plans, except when a woman's life is at risk. The prohibition also will apply to insurance exchanges set up under executive director of the antilast year's federal health care law. Women or employers who want the coverage will have to buy separate, abortion-only policies.

Gov. Sam Brownback, an antiabortion Republican, is all but certain to sign it, having called publicly on the GOP-dominated Legislature to create "a culture of life." The new restrictions would take effect July 1.

Supporters argue that the bill protects the "conscience rights" of employers who want to offer health insurance for workers but oppose abortion. They contend some employers pay for abortion coverage without knowing it - or don't have the clout to avoid the coverage otherwise.

Critics argue the goal is limiting access to abortion by blocking a way for poor and middle-class women to pay for it.

Abortion opponents brush aside such complaints.

"Whatever," Mary Kay Culp, abortion group Kansans for Life, said after hearing one round of criticism. "Cry me a river."

For abortion opponents, the outcome demonstrates how, with cleverness and tenacity, the will of a clear majority of legislators eventually can prevail. For abortion rights supporters, the result shows how few checks exist to ensure proposals are thoroughly vetted and Kansas residents can weigh in at every stage.

A bill containing the same language cleared the House Insurance Committee but died on March 28, when the entire House failed to debate it before an important legislative deadline. The Senate didn't even have a vote in committee on the issue.
