College starts off new year with fun student activities

Each year, Colby Community College puts together a Welcome Week for new students, but this year, the college has had more success than in previous years.

The week began with residence hall move-ins on Saturday and Sunday. Last year, there was only one move-in day, but the college decided to add on Saturday this year and Debbie Schwanke, public information director, said it was very successful.

After move-in on Sunday, there was a family reception followed by a barbecue for all Colby Community College students. The students then had an extreme bowling event where more than 140 students participated.

"The participation has just really been good," Schwanke said. "We find that most students who leave because they're homesick, leave within the first seven to 10 days so we try to make the college feel like a home."

On Monday night, the students went to Colby Aquatic Park free of charge with their student identification or class schedule. Tuesday brought the Colby Community College and community block party followed by the mud volleyball games, which more than 100 students participated in.

"We're really pleased with the participation in the orientation events this week," Schwanke said.

Wednesday night, about 40 students attended the kickball game, and tonight there is a movie night that costs students $3 with their student identification.

Another addition this year is offering special rates for students to attend two concerts in Imperial, Neb., at the Chase County Fair. The first concert is REO Speedwagon Friday night and then The Band Perry/Craig Morgan concert is on Saturday night.

There is also a free Christian concert that is being held in the Cultural Arts Center Friday night.

"The orientation committee did put in a lot of time and effort to plan these events," Schwanke said. "They wanted to make them fun for the students."

A Colby Community College student fielded a ball in a kickball game Wednesday on the softball field on campus. More than 40 students attended the event.

Players got gifts from Miami booster

By Tim Reynolds
AP Sports Writer

Claiming he paid for nightclub outings, sex parties, cars and other gifts, former Miami booster and convicted Ponzi schemer Nevin Shapiro has told Yahoo! Sports he provided extra benefits to 72 of the university's football players and other athletes between 2002 and 2010.

His claims involve several current football players and threaten to bring down a program with a legacy dotted by scandals — but none quite like this.

Yahoo! Sports published its story Tuesday afternoon, hours after Miami coach Al Golden said he was certain that his team would "stay focused" amid an NCAA investigation into claims Shapiro first began making about a year ago.

The site said it spent 100 hours interviewing Shapiro over the span of 11 months and audited thousands of pages of financial and business records to examine his claims.

Shapiro was sentenced in June to 20 years in prison for masterminding a $930 million Ponzi scheme, plus ordered to pay more than $82 million in restitution to investors.

Shapiro said he gave money, cars, yacht trips, jewelry, televisions and other gifts to a list of players including Vince Wilfork, Jon Beason, Antrel Rolle, Devin Hester, Willis McGahee and the late Sean Taylor.

Shapiro also claimed he paid for restaurant meals and in one case, an abortion for a woman impregnated by a player. One former Miami player, running back Tyrone Moss, told Yahoo! Sports he accepted $1,000 from Shapiro around the time he was entering college.

Shapiro has said multiple times in the past year, including in the Yahoo! Sports story posted Tuesday, that he is angry with several of the players he claims to have helped when they were Hurricanes — only to be "abandoned" when he sought their help years later.

Miami officials began cooperating with NCAA investigators not long after Shapiro made claims about his involvement with players last year. University president Donna Shalala and athletic director Shawn Eichorst were questioned by the NCAA this week. The school reiterated Tuesday it takes the allegations seriously.
