Middle schoolers prepare for all-school play on Tuesday

By Judy Rogers
Golden Plains Middle School
The Golden Plains Middle School will be presenting their annual all-school play at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. Tuesday on the stage in Rexford.
This year's play is called the "Mysterious Case of the Missing Ring" and was written by Janie Downey Maxwell. In this fast-paced, madcap mystery, you'll find delightful comedy for all ages in every quirky character - and a surprise ending that rings true!

"The cast of 18 seventh and eighth graders has been working hard to memorize their lines and to create believable characters," said Director Ashley Arnberger. "This dedicated cast has attended after school practices and even come in to work on Monday when there was no school."
She encourages parents, friends and family member to join them for the dress rehearsal in the afternoon if they cannot attend the final performance in the evening.

Federal court begins camera project

TOPEKA (AP) - A pilot project to study the impact of cameras in federal courthouses began this week in Topeka with the recording of a civil case concerning water use in Douglas County.
Four video cameras focused on the witness stand, the lectern where lawyers ask questions, the judge's bench and a desk where evidence is displayed during the proceedings Thursday. The courtroom deputy, Pam Patton, controlled the zoom and changed the court angle under the judge's direction from her desk in front of the judge's bench.
The proceedings were not streamed live but could be viewed online a few hours after the hearing, The Topeka Capital-Journal reported. Viewers can see all four screens simultaneously.

The judge in the water case, U.S. District Judge Julie Robinson, is chairwoman of the Court Administration and Case Management Committee, which is running the three-year pilot involving more than 100 U.S. District Court judges. In Kansas, District Court Judges Kathryn Vratil, J. Thomas Marten, Carlos Murguia, Eric Melgren and Robinson are taking part.
Civil bench and jury trials, as well as civil motions hearings will be recorded and available online for viewing or downloading under the project approved by the Judicial Conference of the United States in March 2011.
In the case before the court Thursday, a rural water district sued the city of Eudora over the city's 2007 annexation of part of the water district, alleging federal statutes protected the district from the city's annexation.

The attorneys, Curtis Tideman and Steven Harris, said the cameras had no effect on how they argued the case.
Robinson didn't make a ruling Thursday.
The camera project has ground rules, including:
Only civil cases will be videotaped because a federal rule prohibits criminal cases from being photographed.
The plaintiff, defendant and judge must agree to the videotaping.
The camera can be turned off if a witness is concerned about being videotaped.
No still photographs will be shot.
