Taylor proposed two solutions to the commissioners, and Chairman Ken Christiansen said they'd go through the numbers and see what can be done.

One suggestion is to increase jail wages in hopes this will attract more applicants.

24/7," he said. "We do not have that manpower at this time or have had for quite a few years." Overcrowding been a continual problem, too. To deal with it, the sheriff's department regularly takes inmates to jails in surrounding counties when the jail here exceeds its nine-inmate limit. That adds transportation and other room-and-board costs Right now, he said, the county has 13 inmates, including one woman housed in Goodland and three men in Atwood.

Since January, Taylor said, he has attempted to improve conditions in the jail area for staff and inmates.

To help with overcrowding "By law, we are supposed a cost of about $2,000, one each day, he said.

Ideally, Taylor said, he would like to start sending any inmates over nine to Atwood or Goodland and on Fridays, transport two inmates out so the jail can begin the weekend with seven inmates.

He said arrests usually increase over the weekend and those prisoners must be accommodated. Transporting inmates would be a regular duty if his office could hire another person, he said.

"We understand completely what you are going through," said Christiansen.

Commissioners are also continuing research on either building a new law enforcement and more sleeping space, three center or expanding the current bunk beds have been installed at facility, but finding money to pay for that is a major problem.
