Q: I have a commemorative silk handkerchief of the coronation of King George VI, given to my mom by her brother years ago. It's off-white with British flags and red polka dots along the sides and a picture of the king in one corner. The words "H.M. King George VI, May 1937" circle his portrait. The edge of the 11-inche square handkerchief is blue. The movie "The King's Speech" and the age of my handkerchief have made me curious. Does my hanky have any value beyond sentimental?

A: Great quantities of commemorative souvenir items from the coronations, weddings and birthdays of royalty have been made since the 1800s, most with pictures of the monarchs and the date of the commemorated event.

The movie may have stimulated interest in items related to King George VI, but the value of your handkerchief has probably not increased. It is worth about $30.

Q: I have a table lamp that was given to my aunt as a wedding present in 1922. I know it was made by the Mosaic Lamp Shade Co. of Chicago, but it looks so much like a Tiffany that it has been mistakenly appraised as such. I hope you can tell me something about the company and give me some idea of the value.

A: Lamps with stained glass shades and bronze bases were first made by Tiffany in 1899. They were so popular that similar lamps were soon being made by other companies.

The company that made your lamp was listed in the 1910 Chicago city directory as "The Mosaic Shade Co." It was in business from about 1905 to 1914. All Tiffany lamps are signed, and Tiffany lamps made after 1902 also are marked with the model number on the base and shade. Not all lamps made by competitors are marked.

Some lamps made by the Mosaic Shade Co. are marked with the name of the company on the base. The value of your lamp depends on the color and design of the shade, its size and its condition. Your lamp could sell for $2,000 to $3,000, if the shade is in good condition.

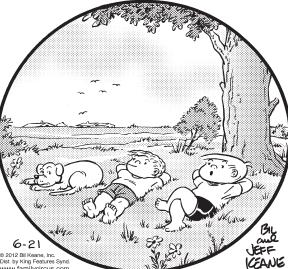

Q: I have my mother's copy of the 1915 interested in buying this?

A: Your book was published by the Priscilla Publishing Co. of Boston. Several "Priscilla Crochet" pattern books were published in the early 1900s. The secret to selling a collectible like yours is to reach a wide audience. You are almost sure to find someone interested. Several early Priscilla pattern books are being offered online for $10 to $20. The books have been reprinted.

It Pays to be Pessimistic

When declarer is confronted with what appears to be a laydown contract, his first obligation is to ask himself, "What can defeat me?" The failure to ask this one simple question has been respon- 2 sible for the demise of many a makable hand.

Consider today's deal where South was in six 2 diamonds and West led the queen of clubs. Declarer won with the ace and promptly played the king, ruffed by East. East returned a trump, and South found himself fighting a losing battle.

He won the trump in his hand, ruffed a club with the diamond king and discarded another club on the heart ace. But South had no place to put his remaining small club, and he eventually went down one.

Declarer was very unlucky to run into a 5-1 club division, but if he had taken this possibility 3 into account and sought a means to deal with it, he might have found the way to assure the contract.

South can see that the slam is sure to make if the adverse clubs are divided 3-3 or 4-2. He can ruff a club with the diamond king in either case, guaranteeing at least 12 tricks.

However, he should also think about the possibility of a 5-1 club split. Should that division exist, the contract is in danger. If declarer tries to cash a second high club prior to ruffing a club in dummy, an opponent might ruff, as in the actual deal.

To cater to this possibility, as well as the normal 3-3 and 4-2 breaks, declarer should invoke a safety play. Rather than try to cash his second high club, he should lead a low one instead!

West wins the trick but cannot do anything to stop the contract. South has only two small clubs left, one of which can be trumped with dummy's king while the other can be discarded on the ace of hearts.
