State criminal registry becomes more effective

Kansans can take advantage of new improvements to their state's criminal offender registry.

The new system allows citizens to sign up for notification e-mails advising when an offender registers a home, work or school address near an address of interest. The new system also includes expanded search capabilities and maps showing offenders' registered locations.

"These enhancements to the offender registry are designed to help keep our communities safe and informed," Kansas Attorney General Derek Schmidt said. "The information in the system will be more easily accessible to the public and law enforcement community."

You can search for offender information by the offender's name, location, reporting compliance and offender type (sex, violent or drug). Searches can also be done by phone number, online identity or e-mail address to determine if the information is associated with a registered offender.

The updates were made as part of the implementation of federal registry system requirements of the Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act. The Kansas legislature adopted these requirements into state law in 2011. The improvements to the registry were funded through federal grants.

Law enforcement officials will also see improvements to the system, which will improve information-sharing capabilities across jurisdictions and with other states.

The offender registry is at www.kbi.ks.gov/registeredoffender.

The Kansas Bureau of Investigation has maintained the Kansas Offender Registration system since its inception in 1993. The state placed a registry on the Internet in 1997.

WORKING FOR RURAL KANSAS

- Helped lead the battle to fund K-12 education and keep rural schools open and viable.
- Working to develop needed rural housing for economic expansion in Northwest Kansas.
- Supported and promoted small business and agriculture at every turn.
- Initiated an amendment to keep our independent oil producers from losing their exemption from the severance tax.
- Helped coordinated the effort to keep our judges in rural Kansas.
- Led several efforts to honor our Veterans, especially those who gave their lives.
- Defends dignity of life at all stages.
- Supported a balanced budget and a "rainy day" fund surplus to cover unexpected expenses.
- Will vote the rural issues for their values to our communities — not their compliance with partisan lines.
