"But, to me, this is just the beginning.... We'll be looking to get more grants later in order to meet our ultimate goal of making Colby the most walkable community in Kansas."

Most of the money, about $245,000, will be used for engineering, she said.

Although it seems like a lot of money, said Carmichael, it can only go so far when you consider Americans with Disabilities Act and other regulations that must be adhered to.

Identified as primary walking routes are parts of Fifth Street, a direct route without crossing the street more than necessary, primarily only sidewalks on one side of each street will be improved on. While there's no date for when work on the sidewalks will begin, City Manager Tyson McGreer said engineering work and environmental studies have already begun. "It's probably the most important step in the process," he said, "and may take awhile. Since this is a pretty extensive project, we are being very careful to make all the right moves and spend every cent as smartly as we can, which takes time."

"We want to get more people active and making healthy lifestyle changes," said Carmichael. 'Right now, it's not normal for people to walk or bike to work; people think it's weird when they see others walking, and we want to change that.

"So much is lost when you drive, including the social aspect kids get when walking to school with their friends. And we are going to make the sidewalks better on these streets so for parents with strollers and for (people in) wheelchairs, too."

Carmichael said the Coalition book.com/tccoalition, which started in 2011 with a $2,000 grant from the Kansas Department of Health and Environment. The Coalition is spearheading efforts for walking trails and a community garden, too. Members helped with the Thomas County Meltdown, providing the "Bod Pod" and blood tests, and with Walk Kansas.

"Basically, anything in the community that encourages a healthy lifestyle, we try to get involved with," said Carmichael. "We try to make the people can go on a walk easier, healthy choice the easy choice."

Booster Club holding wreath fund raiser

The Colby High School Booster Club is holding a holiday wreath fund raiser and orders are due by Friday. The wreaths come from a wreath farm in Molalla, Ore., and are made from Noble Fir along with five other mixed greens. They are decorated with English holly, juniper, cedar, pine, yellow/tan juniper and two pinecones. The wreaths, which are 24 to 26 inches in diameter, cost $40 and will be delivered by mail to your home the first week of December. For information, call Debbie Giebler at 462-0693

The Associated Press

The fate of a tax credit that advocates say is needed to maintain tens of thousands of wind energy jobs will be decided during high-stakes, last-minute negotiations between President Obama and House Republicans, officials said Tuesday.

The wind-energy production tax credit is due to expire at the end of the year, along opposition from some conservative House torts the energy marketplace.

Backers of the credit tried to ramp up pressure to extend the $12 billion break Tuesday with a teleconference featuring several governors, who noted that uncertainty over its fate has led to thousands of job losses across the country. A study found that 37,000 jobs would be lost if the credit expires.
