

College farm plans bull sale

The annual Bull Test Sale will be Friday, March 29, at the Colby Community College farm, according to Dr. Marcy Ward, beef production director at the college.

The 2013 sale will be the largest to date, offering over 85 performance- and efficiency-test bulls, along with 20-plus registered females. Angus, Balancer, Gelbvieh, Hereford, Red Angus, Saler and South Devon breeds will be represented.

"Because of the persistent drought conditions, raising durable efficient cattle has become ... critical," said Ward.

"Colby Community College is ... the only bull sale in the state to offer specific efficiency data. This information will help ranchers improve the bottom line during a time when feed prices are at an all-time high."

Preview for the sale starts at 10 a.m. with highlights during lunch at noon.

The farm is four miles east and one mile north of Colby on U.S. 24.

For information, contact Ward at 462-5060.

Fake police lights beat traffic

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Police in Oregon say a Washington man wove through interstate traffic at 80 mph with phony police lights flashing.

In his passenger seat was his 12-year-old son.

Marion County deputies didn't recognize the 2009 Nissan Maxima as one of their own unmarked vehicles. And when the driver passed a marked police car, the lights went off.

James Winfrey, a 27-year-old from Vancouver, Wash., told police he was only using the lights to help him catch up to friends.
