City, school elections will be held here Tuesday

in Ward 3, Peg Tole said, she decided to campaign as a write-in candidate. Tole said she has lived in Colby since 1982 and has worked at Farmers and Merchants Bank most of that time. Had there been no write-in candidate, City Manager Tyson McGreer said, the mayor could appoint someone, and the other council members would need to approve the choice. DeYoung, Voss, Hutfles and Beringer, the four councilmen whose terms expire this year, all decided not to run again.

On the school board, five people are running for three open seats. They include newcomers Chad Applebury, Kristina Lemman and Rhonda Faber, the wife of Joshua Faber. Current Board President Janice Frahm and Vice President Tracy Rogers are running for re-election, while Susan McLemore decided not to run again.

These seats are at large, meaning that they are not divided into districts, so the top three candidates will be elected.

Frahm lives on a farm outside town, where she said at least 20 kids have lived, including foster children, exchange students, and her own two sons. Seven of them graduated from high school while living there. Rogers, who works at Frontier Ag and has two kids, said he has spent most of his 12 years on the board as the vice president.

Applebury, wastewater manager for the city, said he has two kids in school. Lemman, who has been going to all the recent school board meetings, said she felt she had a duty to run because she has three kids in the school system.

Faber said she found it harder to find chances to volunteer for the school district after she moved her kids out of Heartland Christian School.

The board of trustees at Colby Community College has three open seats, and two incumbents filed to run again.

Cindy Black, office manager at Homeland Realty and Auction, decided not to run again. Audrey Hines decided to run for the seat; she started working at Cornerstone Ag after graduating from Fort Hays State University.

Children enjoy Easter hunts

it looked as if several hundred kids and parents showed up for the hunt.

It took them no more than five minutes to clean the park of eggs each time.

Some of the same kids were seen that afternoon at the College Drive Assembly of God for a smaller hunt. Members showed a short video on an overhead projector in the packed church, followed by a skit by two pastors about the true meaning of Easter.

With fewer kids and fewer eggs, it took about the same amount of time to find them all.

Both events had been postponed for a week because of the snow storm that Saturday.
