Hi-Plains Harmony celebrates 10th year

The Hi-Plains Harmony Chorus of Sweet Adelines International held a banquet in May to celebrate their 10th anniversary. The chorus began when some ladies in the area who were interested in singing came together in May 1990. Then the chorus earned their charter in 1992.

Members are from Goodland, Colby, Oberlin, Hoxie, Jennings, Leoville, Selden, Rexford, and

Grinnell. Karolyn Fiore of Colby, is the current president and Mike Linden of Colby is the director. Special guests at the banquet included husbands, prospective members and former members, which included Garrah Gaumer, Jennings; Jeanette Poore, McCook, Neb.; and Carmelita Calhoun and Patsy Arehart, both of Colby. Another special guest Jr., 33, as an observer on board. Lt. John Sidwell, a spokesman for the department, said the helicopter crashed shortly after midnight as the officers helped investigate a security alarm call from a home improvements warehouse that turned out to be a false alarm.

was former director Don Kready. Jolene Hansen, Rexford, immediate past president, was the emcee for the banquet. Sharee Fromholtz of Colby, the chapter's first president, gave Kready a train whistle to replace his pitch pipe. Jo Kready, a former president and original recruiter, presented a ten-year history on the chorus. Each member wore a different costume to represent the chapter in the past and the present. A decorated cake which was topped with the chapter's recent group picture was enjoyed by all. Group pictures and singing rounded out the delightful evening.

State wants additional wells

neering firm would be getting the plans for the two wells together as soon as possible, and would contact the landowner about the best time to drill them. Jurgens said the state was drilling additional monitoring wells in downtown Goodland as part of the dry cleaner program. He said the new round of wells was because another location of a former dry cleaner had been identified.

Commissioners Davis and Chuck Frankenfeld talked to Way about setting the solid waste fees for next year, and agreed to hold a work session following the next meeting Tuesday, June 20. Way said he has been gathering the cost information, and would also have the figures for the equipment needed for the new landfill.

County Attorney Bonnie Selby said she had reviewed the bid documents from Terranext for the opening of the new landfill, and said that the contract, which was being revised to reflect Kansas laws, would be ready by the end of the week.

Davis handed Selby a two-page letter received that morning from the Department of Health and Environment suggesting a number of minor changes in the contract.

"It looks like they went through it with a fine tooth comb," he commented.

County Clerk Janet Rumpel reported she had a phone call from Commissioner Gary Townsend on Monday, and that he was doing better. She said he was still a bit hoarse, but that he was improving. Townsend is in Denver recuperating from a bone marrow transplant.

Charlotte Linsner of the family shelter had called and postponed her appearance until the next meeting. The agency is requesting $1,000 from the county for next year, and Frankenfeld said he thought it was the only request received so far that was not asking for an increase.

Harvest will be in full swing soon

But even if combines start going into fields today, elevator operators say harvest won't be in full swing until sometime next week.

"It's not going to get cranked up real hard and heavy until next week," said Teels.

Unseasonably high temperatures and little rainfall have caused the crop to mature quickly, but forecasters predict things could return to normal this weekend. That could slow down or halt wheat harvest.

Brooke Taber, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Goodland, said temperatures are expected to drop this weekend and it's supposed to rain. He said rainfall for the year is almost three inches below normal.

"It could make a little difference," Teels said. "Farmers won't be as anxious to start."

Prices remain low, with wheat going for $2.39 in Goodland on Tuesday, and some say they could stay that way.

While yields will be lower in Sherman County, Jensen said, the wheat crop looks good across the state and nation. He said a good portion of the crop here has been damaged by drought, disease and insects.

An average crop means supply and demand will remain steady, he said, which means prices will, too.

"From Oakley east toward Hays, the wheat looks very good," he said. "Near Wichita and Sumner it's pretty decent, and in the Salina area it's not bad. It's dry in northcentral Kansas, but in my estimation it will come close to an average crop statewide."

Elevator operators are shipping out wheat and cleaning elevators to get ready for harvest.

Teels said all of the wheat at the Kanorado branch is gone, although there is still some corn from last fall.

He said the elevator will start staying open later as harvest begins.

"We will stay open as late as the boys cut," he said.

Sign to go up

There is a new sign going up at McDonald's in Goodland, replacing one which was damaged by wind in March.

Commercial Sign Co. of Colby began their preliminary work for the sign on Thursday.

Owner Paul Nelson said the new sign is a bit smaller than the other and has less surface space. He said it is high-wind resistant and was specially built for them. It has been here for about two weeks, but the sign company has had to wait for the winds to subside in order to put it up.
