kanorado chronology

By Dixie Hooker

Kanorado correspondent

Useless facts: A rat can last longer without water than a camel.

Charlene and Dan Mangus have done a lot of traveling during this wheat harvest. Charlene said a car stopped in their driveway last week. A lady got out of the car and rang Charlene's doorbell and told her she had been looking for this house, (Charlene and Danny's home, their house used to be in Kanorado, and they moved it out to the farm a few years back).

The lady's name was Donna Kay Pantzer. She told Charlene she had lived in that house about 60 years ago. And she was up here for a visit and thought she would take a look. She had stopped in at Ruth Ann Felzien's home to find out what had become of it. So Ruth Ann told her where it went and that was why she was there.

Charlene said it became quite a visit, as Pantzer now lives in Cape Town, South Africa. She told them she had traveled to South Africa about 31 years ago for a visit, loved it and decided to stay. And, has been back to the States nine times since. She was located 20 minutes from the Atlantic Ocean and 20 minutes from the Indian Ocean. And if you would like to take some of those African Safaris, she was about two hours from the starting place.

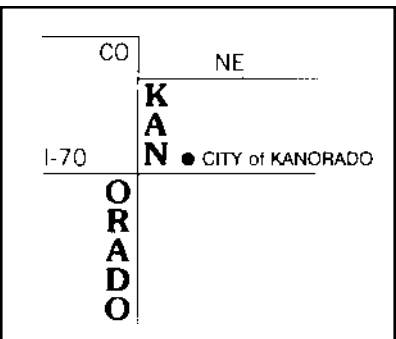

She showed the Mangus family

some of her South African paper money. Charlene said it was really different as some had elephants, lions or tigers on them. The money there is called "rand."

Charlene said Pantzer now writes children's books in all languages including the native South African, and she promised to send one. It was wonderful meeting her Charlene said, and she had the neatest leopard skin slippers on her feet.

For their next trip; their custom cutter was working up at Stratton, Colo., when Dan called him and said they were ready to cut. So he sent down some of his crew and a combine. And low and behold the crew guy was from Paris, France.

The next day he brought his wife and 2-year-old daughter. Their names were Louis and Edith Peron, and daughter Bianca played with Dan and Charlene's little girl Dani. Charlene said Bianca couldn't speak anything but French, but her and Dani did great together. So Dan and Charlene have had quite the adventurous trips while never leaving the farm!
