First National Bank redesigns its website

First National Bank has redesigned its website as a portal, allowing people to link to other services and sites.

The new website allows users to customize a personal web page content to fit their daily Internet needs such as news, local weather forecasts, stock quotes, community affairs, favorite Internet links and electronic shopping.

"We feel this a 'one stop does it all' website," said Donna Pickman, vice president of electronic banking. "Along with our Horizon Online Internet Banking, the new portal website allows our customers greater freedom, from e-banking to e-shopping."

The site provides opportunities for customers to advertise products and do e-shopping. Users will have access to over 2 million products, Pickman said. It also provides the platform for banking developments, such as electronic bank statements and bill presentation.

"Our new website provides personal financial information and an array of electronic options that our customers can customize," said President Larry McCants. "While we want to provide the latest in technological capabilities, our electronic banking systems provide the same convenience and quality as in the last 100 years of personal service to our neighbor."

The bank developed the website with the help of nationwide banking software provider, Jack Henry and Associates.

The bank has offices in Goodland, Colby, Sharon Springs, St. Francis, Quinter and Kirk, Colo. It has $295 million in assets and is the second largest agricultural bank based in Kansas.

The website address is www.fnb.com.
