the goodland gazette

In July 1994, a hot summer day as I recall, I got a phone call from Dixie Hooker of Kanorado. She was calling to ask me if I might know of someone who would like to write a column for a new weekly paper that was coming out. She was working for them and thought I might be able to direct them to someone who could or would do this type of part-time item.

I gave her all my best ideas of the type of person I thought would make an ideal writer. I asked her if she had someone in mind and she casually said. "you." Now I was just the opposite of what I had just gotten through telling her. Thus my venture into the field of working and writing for a newspaper began.

In February 1996, this paperwork was my salvation. as I fought the fight of losing my sister Dorothy. I could hear her telling me I could do it and would do a good job. For many, many weeks it was her words that came echoing back to me that kept me going and writing.

Now the Star is history, sadness to me that the dream of Eric and Roxie didn't pan out. The news that Sept. 27 would be my last column got me to thinking back about all the times spent at the office and working to help make that dream come true. It was a time of mixed feelings.

Then come Friday, Sept. 29, I got the call to check with The Goodland Daily News as they were interested in my column. Over those last couple of days, I didn't answer my phone. I tried to avoid people, as it made me very uncomfortable to hear them tell me how sad they were that I wouldn't be rambling about things in the paper.

By 4 p.m., I was asked to be a part of the Daily News. I'll not cover the hospital and school board meetings, as they have two doing those jobs. So here I sit at my old computer, putting my thoughts, once again, down on paper. I don't really have much news as I had called my contact people and told them I was out. I've now contacted them so the notes will once again find their way to my desk and become a part of the column.

Thank you to all who were so supportive when they thought I was done Ten Commandments on government as a writer. One of my friends told me property and in schools. I'll let the pa-have to have some form of fund-raiser mation about your folks. Hello to you to keep me going. No need now. I'm back and I'll keep writing for who knows how long.

One good note, Leo and Connie Hatcher have returned home. I saw them Thursday evening just minutes after they arrived in Goodland. I put a casserole in the oven and went to their home to share it with them as a welcome home gift. Leo's feeling pretty good, but he still has some work to do to get total usage back of his left hand, arm and leg. He's walking, very slowly, with the help of a cane and Connie. Welcome back, Leo, and continue to regain the use of your left side. and able to go to school for a very brief

I got a letter from a Star reader. Lucille Fixsen Bose, who lives with her husband and two sons in a small town in south central Nebraska called Orleans. She said the population is around 400. They farm and raise cattle.

She said she always read my column first and hopes I keep up the good work. She is the daughter of Ray and Clara Marie Fixsen of Goodland.

Ray and Albert worked together in the early days of Great Western Sugar, so I have known her for a good many years. I remember the first time Mom celebrated her birthday here in Goodland. We had the Fixsen family and our neighbors, Carl and Melba Kruse, over for cake and ice cream.

Mom always felt that Mrs. Fixsen was one of her better friends here. Now Mrs. Fixsen celebrated her 78th birthday on Oct. 2. Lucille went on to say that Ray will have a birthday in December and their 48th wedding anniversary in January. I'll go into those when the time gets closer. Belated birthday greetings, Mrs. Fixsen, and many more.

She also sent me a clipping of a poem on the School Prayer, result of recent controversy about the presence of the per have it and see what they do with it. I think l read it or one similar in the Salina paper or someplace. It is a good piece that makes you think about the happenings in our country at that he was beginning to wonder if he'd this time. Thanks Lucille for the inforand your family.

Don't know of any birthdays or anniversaries, but do wish any who may be having one, a very happy birthday and many more.

Medical updates: Betty Rust is back home from the hospital in Denver following surgery and treatment. Get well wishes, Betty. There have been several who got some form of flu that really made them sick enough to go to the hospital for a few days. Both are home and feeling somewhat weak from the effects of the illness.

Andrew Miller is now on crutches hour or so. Boy was that young man anxious to get back to school. His mom, Jody, told me he is doing quite well and getting around much better. Thanks to all who kept him in cards while he was at the hospital. There are others who are in various stages of recovery, but I don't have all the names. so I will wish you one and all a speedy recovery.

My neighbor, Jonah, got the crud only his ended up as strep throat. His mom had to stay home with him for a couple of days before he was up to going to the sitter. His latest trick is to pick up my newspaper and put it in the box. He's an early riser, so he's up and out before me, most of the time. You never know what he'll do next.

Thankfully, I've only two deaths to mention. They are David Potter and Rod Adams. While I know neither of them, I would like to extend the heartfelt sympathy of our community to their families on their recent loss. May the hands of the Almighty be your guide in the next few uncertain months. Peace be with you all as you reshape your lives following this loss.

Well folks, I've no notes around and I've rambled long enough, so I will sign off for my first official Daily News column. The one in the paper this week was my final one as a Star columnist. This is number one with the Daily News and according to Eric, I've a long way to go to meet the number I did for the Star, which was 322 columns. 'Till next week, take care and I'll see you around. Give me a call if you've got news to share.
