It is once again time for Red Ribbon week. It is celebrated by more than 1 million people each year nationwide in honor of Kiki Camarena, a drug enforcement agent who was murdered in 1985 by the drug cartel in Mexico.

Today, all across the nation, children and adults still wear red ribbons to celebrate Red Ribbon Week which is Oct. 23-31. During this week, various activities are done to promote healthy and drug-free lifestyles and communities work to create awareness about the mpact of substance abuse.

The fact is, * 1,000 people die daily from tobacco related illnesses. * 100,000 deaths each year are alcohol related.

*Alcohol is the No. 1 drug of choice among young people. * Substance abuse is the leading facor in the spread of AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome). * Alcohol is involved in more than 50 percent of all domestic violence *Alcohol is involved in over 50 percent of all traffic fatalities.

*Alcohol related car crashes are the No. 1 killer of vouth.

In Kansas, the purpose of Red Ribbon Week is to present a unified and visible commitment toward drug-free Kansas communities. More than 325,000 Kansans participate in Red Ribbon Week, which encourages the following:

* Increased awareness with probems related to alcohol, tobacco and other drug use.

* Community involvement and support for families wanting to raise drug-free youth.

* Healthy and drug-free lifestyle alernatives that will reduce the risk and increase resilience and proect Kansas youth, families, communiand schools against alcohol, tobacco and other drug use and related risks. Our Goodland schools continue supporting Red Ribbon Week and its awareness to keep our kids drug-free. North, West and Central elementary schools will be handing out "Red Rib- at the prevention center through the

With Election Day near, unions step up efforts

By Jim Suhr

Associated Press Writer DETROIT — Plodding through eye-straining pages of phone numbers, Michael Holt works the numbing routine of the United Auto Workers' phone bank: Ring up UAW colleagues and ask them to back the Democratic presidential ticket.

The 52-year-old volunteer uses a red pen to log in favorable responses. Two hours and dozens of calls into it one day this week, he estimates one-third have merited the "good ink."

"The way I look at it, this could make or break us," says Holt, a "UAW Supports Al Gore and Joe Lieberman" sign behind him. "This election is so instrumental to union's lifeline, and that's why we're pushing, beating the bushes, turning over the tables to get our constituents to vote."

Organized labor is hustling with door-to-door walks, phone banks and mass mailings, pressing for a Nov. 7 outcome that has the union label — a victory by Gore and Lieberman.

Unions won't say how much their get-out-the-vote blitzes are costing but insist that, whatever the price, it's worth it. In the tightest presidential race in 40 years, organized labor thinks its ability to rally the rank and file could make the difference for Gore against Republican George W. Bush, especially in such union-thick swing states as Michigan.

Said Wes Wells of neighboring Ohio's 95,000-member Miami Valley AFL-CIO: "This is probably the most massive get-out-the-vote effort we've ever put together.'

In all, unions say they have registered 2 million new voters, most of them union members. Now, said David Hecker, secretary-treasurer of the 30,000-member Michigan Federation of Teachers, "It's a 100-yard dash, an all-out sprint. It's like you're 10 points behind no matter what the polls tell you."

Exit polls in the 1996 general election found that 59 percent of union households voted to re-elect Democrat Bill Clinton. Thirty percent voted for the GOP's Bob Dole, 9 percent for Reform Party candidate Ross Perot.

Two years ago, Democrats gained House seats and broke even in the Senate with the help of labor's grass-roots efforts.

This time around, the AFL-CIO has committees in 71 congressional districts in 25 states to distribute campaign literature to more than one-fifth of its 13.5 million members, double the percentage of 1998. Union members who get candidate information tend to surveys indicate.

ture to union households, said union president Gerald McEntee.

Nationwide, he said, the union has hundreds of full-time campaign staffers working and expects to make 850,000 get-out-the-vote calls.

The United Auto Workers' "ground war" has included mailings of more than 2 million pieces of campaign material to its Michigan members alone. UAW phone banks are buzzing statewide, some manned by retirees in small office fronts or at home.

"We're running at about 99 percent speed and will be at 105 percent by next week," said Dick Long, head of the union's legislative arm. "It's crazy around here. We don't have any staff in the office but me; they're all out coordinating.'

A victorious Bush could name Supreme Court justices who "could radically change things we've bargained for over the years," Long said. "We have a responsibility to protect our interests."

One new factor this year: The United Auto Workers' latest contract with major U.S. automakers makes Election Day a holiday for all 400,000 working members.

Michigan GOP Gov. John Engler has called that holiday "the largest single corporate contribution in American history," an agreement that "dwarfs the other money in politics."

He says U.S. automakers "didn't know what they were doing" when they gave the UAW the day off.

Hoping to sway UAW workers Bush's way, Michigan's GOP unveiled a new TV ad this week in which former Chrysler chief Lee Iacocca says Gore's environmentally "extreme ideas" could cost autoworker jobs. Democrats fired back with a radio spot saying Bush would "sit by and let the Japanese and others develop and build a new engine — and not us.'

For the 11,000-member Detroit Federation of Teachers, getting out the vote means "just contacting people however we can" — at union meetings, church and neighborhood gatherings and weekend rallies, said president John Elliott. "The literature's going out like snowflakes. It goes out by the boxload," Elliott said.

Partnering with the area AFL-CIO, the teachers' union on Friday will begin daily shuttles for voters wanting to submit absentee ballots, then provide Election Day rides to the polls, the federation's Richard Berlin said.

In a satellite address last weekend to Service Employees International Union members in 18 cities, Gore implored union workers to push for "one support the labor-backed candidate, more vote in every precinct." As soon as he gets the chance, Thompson said, he is going to go see Knitig to thank him for pulling his wife out of her burning vehicle.

Gutsch's injuries were less severe He had been released from Goodland Regional Medical Center, where he stayed for several days recovering from a head injury, and said he is doing fine now.

'There were no serious injuries," he said. "I'm just a little sore."

He said he was just glad Bonnie Thompson is doing all right.
