Rockies' player fills roles

TUCSON (AP) — Colorado manager Buddy Bell so values Terry Shumpert that he is reluctant to write him into the starting lineup. Shumpert is simply too versatile.
 Besides posting the league's second-best pinch-hitting average last year (.326), Shumpert played at all four infield positions and in left field. Over the last two seasons, he has played in seven positions — everything except pitcher and catcher. He also can steal a base.
 "Shump can give us so much late in the game," Bell said. "He can help offensively, he's a great pinch-hitter, he can run and catch. It's nice to have someone like him to play different roles on our club."
 Bell's dilemma is how to get Shumpert enough playing time to stay sharp but still have him to turn to when the game is close in the late innings.
 Shumpert, 34, was one of only three

National League players to start in every infield position last year. But on the Rockies, with All-Stars Todd Helton and Jeff Cirillo at first and third, respectively, and Gold Glover Neifi Perez at shortstop, Shumpert's only real option is at second base.
 He'll share time at second with Todd Walker this season, although the latter is expected to get most of the starts.
 "We want to make sure he gets some playing time but is still available late," Bell said. "That's not great for him but important for our club."
 Many players look at the utility role as a curse. Being idle for long periods of time and then being expected to jump into the fire, players can think of themselves as second-best. Not Shumpert.
 "The only reason I think other guys maybe wouldn't be as successful is because they wouldn't want the role," he said. "They wouldn't settle for it. That's where for me the team comes first. You want to win."
 "I think everyone here wants to play all the time. It's just in what way are you going to help the team?"
 Shumpert's .326 average as a pinch-hitter (15-for-46) trailed only Hal Morris' .333 mark. He had 10 pinch-hit RBIs, four of which put the Rockies in the lead.
 "I think along the way I've been put in a lot of positions through the minor leagues and the big leagues that have prepared me for the situations here," he said, "because I had to come off the bench, pinch-hit, just do whatever to
