Girls receive money in essay contest

Lea Shores and Taylor Raile were this year's winners of the Goodland Elks Lodge Americanism Essay Contest on the topic, "Why I'm Proud to be an American."

Shores, a sixth grader at North Elementary, is the daughter of Nancy Shores of Goodland. Raile, in the fifth grade at North, is the daughter of Rich Raile of Edson.

Both received $50 savings bonds from the Goodland Elks. The bonds were presented to the girls by Ron Ackerman, an Elks officer, on Thursday during an awards ceremony at the school.

The essays were judged by an independent committee made up of former teachers and were forwarded to the Kansas Elks Americanism chairman.

Shores' essay is as follows:

I'm proud to be an American because to me it means making peace within all the world. We help our neighbors and try to make the whole universe a better place. We are always learning and studying new ideas that will help stop pollution, but leaving the environment the way it was when we started. America means a free land where everyone is treated equally. We help countries in much need and not ask anything in return. People are trying to learn new technology and new powers, so fewer and fewer people have to live in poverty. America means many people working together to stop war, violence and racism, so the human race can succeed to live for a whole eternity.

America means that we reach higher, stretch broader and stand taller to help everyone and everything. Raile's essay reads:

America is filled with nice people. We are free to run our own lives. We are thankful for the liberties we have. We are have to worry about being put in jail. I all equal and can go to the same places love who I am, a proud American.

no matter what our skin color is. We are free to show the love we have in our hearts. We have the right to go to church where we want. As Americans, we are free to vote for whom we want. We have the right to say what we want and not

Kids should be prepared to be assertive

Are our kids well prepared for being verbally assertive in a healthy way? Assertive and healthy might not make sense at first, but when it means standing up against the use of alcohol and drugs or other issues which kids feel are not OK, it just

When I say to be "verbally assertive," I don't mean using four-letter words and yelling at the top of your lungs. Instead I mean being capable of using a firm "no" when they are being pressured to use these substances.

As parents, we worry about teaching our kids good manners, such as being courteous and listening to others without interrupting. If these are truly important to us as parents, shouldn't teaching them to be firm in their convictions also?

Knowing how to say "no" when that is the way they want it and knowing how to express their opinions as well as respect the opinions of others should begin at a very young age. By demonstrating that we respect their decisions, likes and opinions, including accepting a "no" on their part, we are indicating that we have confidence in them and that they may the need for substances. rest and/or conviction of those persons express their feelings without fear of

If we consume these substances, there is a greater chance our children will also. Sometimes adults adopt behaviors which are not very healthy to help solve their problems. For example, how many times have we heard someone say, "I've had a terrible day; I need a drink."

We need to make it very clear that this is not the best way to combat our tension or the best example we can show our children. It is fundamental that they understand that resorting to consumption of alcohol or drugs to relax or combat tension is an unhealthy choice. We need to teach our kids to be responsible and know how to make healthy decisions without

We can also learn at the same time as our kids do by demonstrating and showing them that there are other ways of celebrating special times in our lives. We should remind our youth that in order to purchase and consume alcohol a person must be 21 years of age or older and that along with that purchase and consumption there is a great deal of responsibility involved. And that illegal drugs are just that — illegal — for anyone!

There are no guarantees that our children will not try or begin using any of these substances, but with guidance and support from the people who love them and want the best for them, it may give them the There are a variety of ways to keep tools they need to use that assertive children from imitating some of "no" to reject the pressures which

Agreement reached on water quality

TOPEKA(AP) — The state and the Eederal Environmental Protection Agency reached an agreement over water quality standards that gives Kansas until May 17 to submit new pollution regulations.

Some legislators called the agreement a victory Monday and said it resembles their proposal to set up a process for the Kansas Department of Health and Environment to review its classification of streams.

Under the agreement, the departnent must review the classification of 1,456 streams and lakes over the next five years.

"It's a victory," said Sen. Robert Tyson, chairman of the Senate Natural Resources Committee. "I'm proud of our bill. We're establishing state rights.'

The EPA promised to review regulations submitted by the state and adopt them by July 31, 2002. Until it does, the state's current water quality standards remain in effect.

KDHE Secretary Clyde Graeber and the EPA's acting regional administrator William Rice signed the agreement Monday afternoon.

The department had not previously supported the legislative proposal backed strongly by Tyson, R-Parker, and 21 agricultural groups.

Suicides among Kansas teens on the rise

TOPEKA (AP) — Suicides among Kansas teens and young adults increased during the 1990s, a new state report shows.

The Kansas Department of Health and Environment reported a 32 percent increase in suicides among people aged 15 to 24 from 1989 to 1998. But that figure reflects a relatively small number of people - 47 suicides in 1989, compared with 62 in 1998.

This is the first time the state has made such a detailed report on suicides.
