not be present by the bidding party.

City would be required to assist in the pickup and dumping of the cardboard. The county would be required to assist in the licensing and pickup of the hazardous waste. Cost about $50,000 a year.

Option 6—joint recycling program with Thomas County. Two trailers would be purchased with one taken to Colby as needed to be dumped into the Colby recycling system.

Advantages: will take all kind of materials with the exception of cardboard, but does not address household hazardous waste.

Disadvantage: limited control of program and need to arrange for labor to handle transportation to Colby and trailer and vehicle expenses.

Estimated cost of $30,000 for the trailers and $28,000 a year in expenses and labor.

The committee has learned there are good points and holes in most any plan available. What the city and county decide to do may be more of fitting pieces together to handle the most important needs, which fit within the budgets of the two boards.

What messages are children learning from media?

At this very minute, as you read this article, what type of media message is your child watching, listening to or reading?

Some advertisements may glamorize or normalize use of alcohol and tobacco, or in some cases other drugs.

Glamorization associates the use of these drugs with desirable qualities such as popularity, success, attractiveness, independence, maturity, fun, celebration, relaxation and an escape from reality. Normalization portrays the use of alcohol and tobacco as a routine, natural part of everyday activities.

The power of these associations is strengthened significantly by the high frequency with which they appear in every medium, including television, radio, the Internet, magazines, music, billboards and in-store promotions at convenience stores which are commonly frequented by youth. Many messages tend to undermined the family values some of us have taught our children.

As we are all aware, our youth have many challenging obstacles to deal with and the use of drugs is only ones. If we can help strengthen their abilities and skills needed to make choices and decisions based on their family and social values rather than based on negative depictions of people and their behavior, we might possibly be helping them to make life-long, healthy choices which will follow them into adulthood.

Some of our local youth and at least one of their parents have been chosen by their peer leaders to participate in an outreach project called “MediaSharp.” This project requires parents of the participating youth to chose and view (with their child) one movie from a list of five movies chosen by the group of youths. After reviewing information from the front and back covers of the videos, the selected movie is voted on by the parent, on a scale from 1 to 5, with 1 being the video they would most approve for their child to watch. The video with the most lowest number will be the selected video.

The list of videos was chosen by the youth according to what they feel would be OK for them to watch. All the participating youths and their parent(s) will watch the chosen video together in two separate sessions. Each session consists of a group of 15 youths and their parent(s). The youths range in age from 12 to 16. The first session was held Friday and the second session will be held on Friday, June 15.

Each child and parent has each filled out a pre-questionnaire sheet regarding movies, videos and watching television. After the video, they will each fill out a post-questionnaire on the movie they watched and discuss the contents of the movie. Pizza, pop and dessert will be served and door prizes given away.

The purpose of this project is not to assume that all media messages are “bad and manipulative,” but to show that we do get most of our information from the media, which can also promote healthy as well as unhealthy lifestyles.

In addition to alerting us to products and services that can make life easier and more enjoyable, media provides us with many benefits, including entertainment, relaxation, information, drama, excitement and laughter. Rather than deny these benefits, MediaSharp works to provide an approach to recognize media’s potential and shortcomings. Most importantly, MediaSharp seeks to meet youths on their own ground, acknowledging and respecting their own interests, needs and values. It does not try to tell them what to do, think or feel about the media or even about tobacco and alcohol. We cannot make decisions for young people, but we can give them the facts so they can make informed choices.

The movie videos were chosen because they tend to be popular with youths. This will be used to help them learn and understand that what is shown on screen usually is not real life.

In some cases television, videos and movies have become a “baby-sitter” for our kids. As parents, it is up to us to decide if we will let our kids watch a movie or video. If you are interested in finding out more about movies and their content, you can log onto www.screenit.com.

sonal witnesses, then with the 10 media witnesses, then squinted toward the tinted window shielding the 10 victims’ witnesses from his view.

The lethal injection was administered to his right leg. When the first drug was delivered, he let out a couple of deep breaths, followed by a fluttery breath. His head moved back, his gaze fixed on the ceiling, and his eyes went glassy.

In Washington, President Bush declared that McVeigh had “met the fate he chose for himself six years ago.”

“Today, every living person who was hurt by the evil done in Oklahoma City can rest in the knowledge that there has been a reckoning,” Bush said.

In a recent letter to The Buffalo News, McVeigh said his body would be released to one his attorneys and cremated, and his ashes would be scattered in an undisclosed location.

In Oklahoma City, Kathleen Treanor, whose 4-year-old daughter, Ashley, and her husband’s parents died in the bombing, watched the closed-circuit broadcast. Afterward, she held up a picture of her daughter and said: “I thought of her every step of the way.”

Treanor said the scene at the broadcast was quiet and respectful. Karen Jones, whose husband was killed in the attack, said she heard a few people clap after it was over and a few cried.

Larry Whicher, the brother of a bombing victim, said McVeigh looked straight into the camera with a cold, blank stare in the moments before he died _ “and that stare said volumes.” The camera was suspended from the ceiling and pointed at an angle at his face.

“He had a look of defiance and that if he could, he’d do it all over again,” Whicher said. He added: “I don’t think he gave himself to the Lord. I don’t think he repented and personally, I think he’s in hell.”

Jay Sawyer, who also watched via television, said: “Without saying anything, he got the final word, absolutely. His teeth were clenched, just like when they showed him coming out of that facility when he was first arrested. His teeth were clenched, his lips were pursed and just a blank stare.”

A man wakes up in the morning after sleeping on an advertised bed, in advertised pajamas. He will bathe in an advertised tub, wash with advertised soap, shave with an advertised shaving cream, eat a breakfast of advertised juice, cereal and toast (toasted in an advertised toaster), put on advertised clothes, and glance at his advertised watch. He will ride to work in an advertised car, sit at an advertised desk and write with an advertised pen. Yet this man hesitates to advertise, saying that advertising doesn’t pay. Finally, when his unadvertised business fails, he will advertise it for sale.
