Farmers plow field with antiques

EUDORA (AP) — Some farmers revved up their antique tractors during the weekend for a joint venture at plowing a field.

About a dozen of them turned out south of Eudora on Saturday to plow the 20 acres belonging to Bob Miller. They had planned to do it earlier in the summer but were rained out twice.

"It just kind of revives a lot of old memories for me," said Bob Gabriel. "And there's a lot of this younger generation that has never driven a plow like this before."

"Every inch of ground was plowed," he said. "It was a chore that had to be done."

At the urging of farmer Richard Krabe, the neighbors first got their old tractors together in the fall of 1999. Most of the antique tractors, made between 1940 and 1960, sit unused much of the year. Some are used to plow small garden plots.

The wheat planted on Miller's land was harvested earlier this summer, and now a spring crop will be planted there.

"Richard told us to bring our old tractors together and come find out how it was done in the olden days," said Brad Neis. "We can get the old tractors out and blow the cobwebs off them."

Neis said he's grateful for the modern conveniences, including air-conditioned cabs, on today's tractors.

"I don't see how they did it back then," he said.
