

Fair parade brings out the best in people

Members of the Class of '47 checked out the engine of the antique truck they used for the fair parade Saturday.

Veterans reached out to help a fellow veteran onto the Veterans of Foreign Wars float.

4-H ambassadors handled sign-in for the parade, and used the information to give to the announcers so the audience and judges knew who was in the parade. The ambassadors handled all the parade organization.

This family was prepared for the Northwest Kansas District Free Fair parade Saturday, including the bags to collect the candy thrown from many floats, cars and horses.

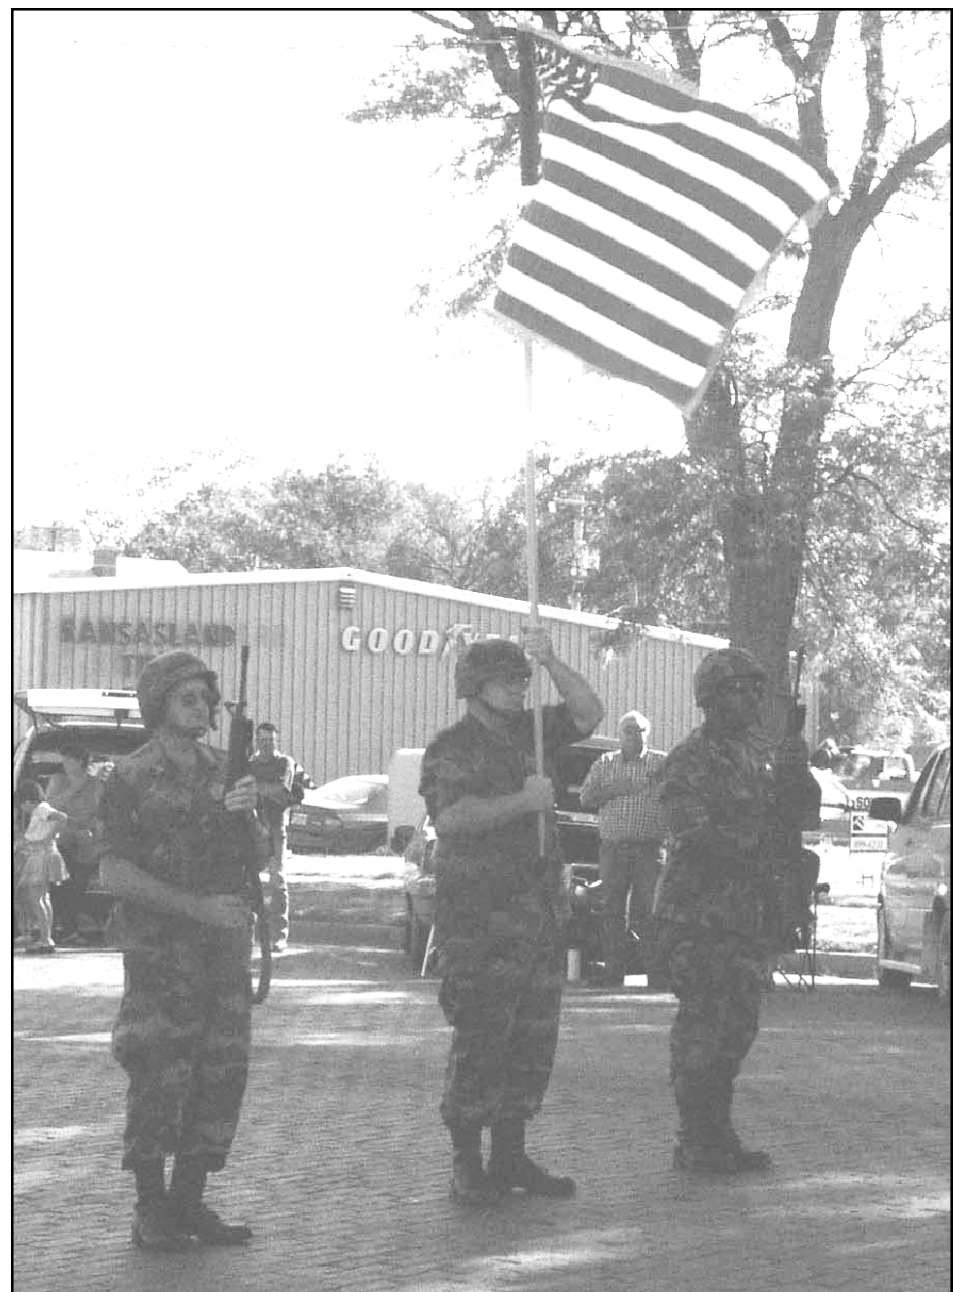

Always ready to shake hands with youngsters, McGruff, the crime dog, worked the cars that were waiting for the parade to start. He shook hands with the grandchildren of Carla Wurtz, who entered her yellow

Photos by Tom Betz
/ The Goodland
Daily News

Relaxed in the shade, these three young girls awaited the start of the fair parade, and were ready to throw candy to the audience.

Members of the Kansas National Guard of Goodland braved the nearly 100-degree heat to present the colors for the fair parade Saturday.