today in history

Nov. 13,1901: A great deal of vandalism was committed in Goodland by gangs of young toughs last Halloween. Outhouses and coal houses were overturned and smashed, wagons run off and taken apart and signs and gates carried away. One crowd was guilty of burglary into the Opera House, knocking down the stovepipe and scattering chairs about the hall, and completely smashing the piano stool. Many of the offenses were too serious to go without punishment, and if passed by this time, more valuable property will possibly be destroyed next year.

Four couples mark 50 years together

The year 1951 apparently was a good year for marriage. I reported on two 50th anniversaries last week and have two more this week.

Wayne and Carol Gatschall and Carl and Elmarie Nelson also had anniversaries this past weekend, 50 years of marriage. Sincere best wishes to both these couples.

Best wishes to Jennifer Mentzer and Sidney Rasure for birthdays this week. From all reports the annual chicken noodle dinner / bake sale at the Episcopal Church was a good day. A year ago we battled a blizzard. We almost canceled the dinner, but after all the preparations we went ahead. In spite of the weather the day turned out to be better than hoped. This weekend was perfect shirt sleeve weather to venture out for a dinner. Thanks to all those who came and helped make it a success. One more fund raiser that I know of is the pancake feed at the Knights of Columbus on Saturday the 17th starting at 7 a.m. It seems there is something on most of these weekends before the holidays.

The 17th is also the day for the annual craft sales at both the VFW and Max Jones. At 4 p.m. the same day will be the Christmas Parade by the Chamber of Commerce down Main Street. I don't know all the details, but be sure to watch for news of it in the paper this week.

There are two more families and friends mourning the loss of a loved one. Sincere sympathy to the Elston

Hazardous material teams now in greater demand

WICHITA (AP) — On Sept. 10, Sedgwick County Fire Chief Stewart Segraves was in Alabama taking a course on nuclear and chemical weapons. One objective was learning to cope with as many as 10,000 victims.

Someone asked, "When will we ever have to deal with 10,000 patients?" The next day, Segraves recalls, the class had its answer.

In the wake of the Sept. 11 terrorist hijackings and the anthrax attacks that followed, hazardous materials handlers have been in greater demand than ever before.

"Up until that time, terroristic-type stuff was really a new thing," said Lt. Kip Hiebert, a firefighter and member of the Wichita-Sedgwick County hazardous material response team.

On average, the 45-member team receives a dozen calls a day about suspected anthrax — well below the 100-plus calls that came in over five days last month, but still more than in anyone's memory.

Team members are firefighters who have taken at least 80 hours of courses in chemistry, operations and technician work. Some have hundreds of hours in training beyond that, giving them the expertise to train other firefighters, medical service and health department officials throughout the Midwest.

They deal with anthrax reports, discarded drums on the roadside, gas odors, gas spills and chemical leaks, among other things.

There is no additional pay or benefits for the duties, but the firefighters say compensation wasn't the reason for joining the team.

"I wanted to protect myself and my people," said Wichita fire Capt. Brian Hoy, who has been with the team for 17 years.
