

Wide receiver keeps sense of humor

GREELEY, Colo. (AP) — Ed McCaffrey may not have a healthy leg to stand on, but he hasn't lost his sense of humor.

Almost fully recovered from a gruesome injury when he broke both bones in his lower left leg in last season's opener, the Denver Broncos wide receiver now is hobbled by a strained right quadriceps.

While McCaffrey calls the latter injury annoying, it's one he can joke about.

Ever sensitive to remarks about his speed — which, in fact, is decent — McCaffrey said the quadriceps injury puts him in good company.

"I've heard that only extremely fast people can even come close to straining a quad," he said Thursday. "So I guess I was moving around better than normal during the game the other night."

McCaffrey was injured during the Broncos' 27-3 win over the Chicago Bears in a preseason opener Saturday night. He aggravated it during a subsequent practice on Monday and missed his third straight day of practice on Thursday.

Coach Mike Shanahan has ruled McCaffrey out of the Broncos' next game, Monday night against San Francisco. McCaffrey, however, intends to have the final say.

"I haven't written that game off yet," he said. "I'm hoping to convince him to let me play. If I can practice Friday, maybe he'll let me play. I don't want to miss any games."

The Broncos will hold their final practice here Friday, then break camp and return to Denver.

Football practices to start

Practices for the Goodland Activities Center flag football teams will start Monday.

The kids are divided into three leagues, based on age, and the teams are co-ed. There is as little contact as possible in the games, said Donna Terry, administrator of the center.

The games will start Monday, August 26 at North Elementary School, she said, and will be held every Monday and Tuesday through September. The schedule can be found at the centers website, www.goodlandnet.com/gac.
