About 80 kids competed in punt, pass, kick contest

Kids lined up this weekend at the football field at Goodland High School to see how far they could punt, pass and kick a football, and the winners can head off to a sectional competition in Colorado.

Almost 80 kids made their way to Cowboy Stadium for a chance to win the NFL Gatorade Punt, Pass and Kick competition Saturday.

The event was held in conjunction with the Flatlander Fall Festival on Main.

The competition allows youngsters to see how well they stack up against their classmates in these football skills. Winners can go on to Parker, Colo., for a sectional competition, and possibly regional and national events later in the year.

Scores are based on distance and accuracy, with points taken off if a ball goes too far left or right.

Girls and boys from 8 to 15-years old could take part in the event, and the kids were separated into age/sex divisions.

No 14 or 15-year-old boys competed this year.

Last year Bobby Miller, then 13, won the contest and made it all the way to the national competition, where he finished fourth.

In the 8 through 9-years old division, Reed Bellamy won for the boys with a cumulative score of 130 feet. Pricilla Ledesma was the highest scoring girl with 20 feet 9 inches.

Tate Andrews of Sharon Springs won the 10-11 boys' division with 253-5. Michelle Smith won the girls division with 177-5.

The boys' winner in the 12-13 age group was Jason Krayca with 260-11. Samantha Raymer won the girls' with 177-9.

Amber Cowan won the 14-15 girls' division with 167-6.

The sectional meet will be held Sunday, Oct. 13.

Winners of that competition can go on to the regional meet which will be held at a Denver Broncos game later this fall.
