N. Korea moves fuel rods

SEOUL, South Korea(AP)-South IAEA, Mohamed ElBaradei, said to-Korea's president said today his nation would never tolerate North Korea's efforts to develop nuclear weapons, as U.N. monitors accused the North of engaging in "nuclear brinkmanship."

Pyongyang has moved 1,000 fresh fuel rods to a storage facility at its main nuclear reactor in Yongbyon, 50 miles north of the capital — its latest step toward reactivating the facility in defiance of the U.N. nuclear watchdog and the United States.

The North insisted today it was a "peace-loving" nation and is restarting the plant only to generate electricity, a claim rejected by the United States. Experts say that with plutonium from the facility, the North could produce nuclear weapons within months.

The new fuel rods have not yet been loaded into the reactor core at Yongbyon, said Mark Gwozdecky, spokesman for the International Atomic Energy Agency. He estimated that it would take "at least a month and maybe several months" to restart the 5megawatt reactor, which has been mothballed since 1994.

In the past week, North Korea removed U.N. monitoring seals and cameras from its nuclear facilities, ignoring IAEA warnings. Among the facilities stripped of surveillance equipment was a plant for reprocessing spent fuel rods — a process that produces plutonium — and a storage room with 8,000 such rods.

8,000 spent rods hold enough weapons-grade plutonium to make several nuclear bombs.

In a statement, ElBaradei said that the facilities. North Korea has no "legitimate peaceful use for plutonium.'

"Moving toward restarting its nuclear facilities without appropriate safeguards, and toward producing plutonium raises serious nonproliferation tary. concerns and is tantamount to nuclear brinkmanship," ElBaradei said.

The IAEA has reported no activity at the reprocessing plant. But "we're concerned that it might operate without our safeguards in place," Gwozdecky said.

South Korean President Kim Daejung told a special Cabinet meeting that 1994, North Korea froze its plutonium-North Korea's nuclear weapons development.'

But he said the standoff should be resolved through dialogue. State media in the North today defended Pyongyang's move to restart

"The United States is going around trying to stir public opinion internationally, as though this is a sign of developing nuclear weapons," state-run Radio Pyongyang said in a commentroops killed a senior Islamic Jihad militant in a gunbattle at his West Bank house today that left four soldiers wounded, one seriously, the army said. Separate clashes in the West Bank and Gaza killed three other Palestinians, including two gunmen and a high school student shot during a stonethrowing confrontation with Israeli troops, Palestinian and Israeli officials said.

Early today, Israeli troops surrounded the two-story home of Hamza Abu Roub, 37, a leader of Islamic Jihad's military wing in the northern West Bank, and demanded that he surrender, the army and residents said.

Abu Roub sent out his wife and children, said a neighbor in the town of Kabatiya, speaking on condition of anonymity. The fugitive then appeared near the wall of his house and began shooting, drawing heavy return fire. LAHORE, Pakistan — Police detained four people, including a Muslim cleric who allegedly urged his followers to kill Christians, after a Christmas Day grenade attack on a Pakistani church that killed three young girls and wounded 13 other people.

Two assailants covered in burgas, the all-encompassing garment worn by women in some Islamic countries, tossed a grenade into the middle of worshippers at a Christmas Day service

Wednesday in Chianwala, about 40 miles northwest of Lahore.

The cleric, who uses only the one name, Afzar, was being detained because of hateful remarks toward Christians made three days earlier in a sermon at a mosque in the district of Daska, where Chianwala is located, police said. Authorities say they have no evidence yet that he was directly involved in the attack.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — You won't find many chestnuts roasting on open fires this holiday season.

Once a staple food in the diets of American Indians and Appalachian pioneers, they have been scarce since the late 19th century.

Two forestry researchers from the University of Missouri at Columbia are working to change that.

The two, Michael Gold and Ken Hunt, lead a team that is developing imported chestnut tree varieties for the region's commercial nut growers and backyard gardeners.

The American chestnut isn't native trees, Gold said.

to Missouri or Kansas, but Chinese chestnuts grow well here, Gold said. They also have a better nut for eating.

Some grocers sell chestnuts imported from Italy or China during the holidays for $3.50 to $4 a pound, said John Wagner, retail sales manager for Liberty Fruit Company Inc., a produce wholesaler in Kansas City, Kan.

But with lower transportation costs, properly either, he said. Missouri and Kansas farmers might cut that price, Wagner said.

Missouri and Kansas have commercial pecan industries, but chestnut trees produce nuts more quickly than pecan they are added to other dishes.

Growers are just beginning to look at chestnuts as a crop, and it will take 15 years for a local market to develop fully, Gold said.

The market is weak because most American consumers aren't familiar with the nuts and the crop is very seasonal, Gold said.

Grocers often don't handle them

Unlike other nuts, chestnuts need to be refrigerated or they will spoil. Also, they need to be roasted before they are eaten, or boiled and ground up before
