Blast kills 22 in Israel

TELAVIV, Israel — In response to twin Palestinian suicide bombings that killed 22 people, Israel decided today to close three Palestinian universities, intensify raids against suspected militants and bar Palestinian officials from holding key meetings in the West Bank and abroad.

The blasts, which also wounded 100 people, went off seconds apart Sunday evening in a crowded, old part of Tel Aviv. It was the deadliest attack in nearly a year. Several of the dead and many of the wounded were foreign workers.

A splinter group of the Al Aqsa Martyrs' Brigade, a militia linked to Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement, claimed responsibility. The bombers were identified as two young men from the West Bank city of Nablus.

The blasts came just three weeks before Israel's Jan. 28 general election and ended a period of six weeks without bombings, one of the longest of relative calm in the past 27 months of fighting.

In Washington, President Bush called the attack "a despicable act of murder" and said Secretary of State Colin Powell had called Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon to express America's condolences.

Parts of the declaration were to be hashed out in today's meeting, but p.m., she said. Security officials the essence of the document was that "reporting to the Security ing amiss. Planes took off and Council would be something that landed during the sweep, but paswould happen if they do not comply," the official said.

There appeared to be broad support on the agency's board for the idea of giving North Korea a final chance, and turning the issue over to the Security Council today "is very unlikely," the official said.
