Rock guitarist released

By the Associated Press INTERNATIONAL

LONDON—Rock guitarist Pete Townshend was released from police custody today, resting at home after his arrest on suspicion of possessing indecent images of children, his lawyer said.

Police questioned the founding member of The Who at a southwest London police station for an hour and 20 minutes Monday night, releasing him shortly after midnight, nearly five hours after he was first detained.

A police spokesman said the legendary musician had signed an agreement saying he would return to the station later in January.

Reporters saw Townshend who has acknowledged using a Web site advertising child pornography but says he was merely doing research for his autobiography leaving the station in the back seat of a Mercedes, lying down partially covered by what appeared to be a bag or a coat.

"He is going home to get some rest," his lawyer John Cohen said. "He is tired but all right." Cohen said the guitarist might be required to answer more questions later.

The rock star has not been charged with a crime. Under British law, suspects are not charged immediately upon arrest and some arrested people are eventually released without charge.

STAMFORD, Conn. — Sen. Joe Lieberman spent his first day as a presidential candidate on familiar ground — at his old high school and his mother's house.

But over the next several weeks, Lieberman will fly far afield — to New Hampshire, Iowa, South Carolina and Arizona — in search of votes and campaign donations to secure the Democratic nomination. "Some mornings when I wake up, I may not know exactly where I am. But I promise you, I will always know who I am and what I stand for," he said Monday in announcing his candidacy.

Lieberman—who could become the nation's first Jewish president — said his candidacy would be "less plausible" if former Vice President Al Gore had not chosen him as his running-mate.

The experience of the presidential campaign trail, with its grueling travel schedule and long hours, will give him an advantage over other less-experienced candidates, he said.

In announcing his candidacy, Lieberman criticized President Bush while promising to "talk straight to the American people" and show them he is "a different kind of Democrat."
