With the present shelter, she said, the dogs have houses under a roof and can run around in outdoor pens that are an average of 10 feet by 25

"It's not a clinical setting," Rodgers said. "That's what makes our shelter different than others."

The shelter is really a large foster home, she said, that houses around 30 animals. If there are over 19 animals in one location, Thorpe said, it has to be called a shelter.

That shelter and all the foster homes are certified by the state, Rodgers said. Besides caring for the animals in foster homes and the shelter, she said, the board members also care for the animals in the city

Some of the neighbors near the roadside park site objected to building the shelter there, Rodgers said, because there would be some noise.

"We wanted to be good neighbors," she said, "and we couldn't guarantee them anything as far as the noise is concerned."

With so many dogs at one site, she said, they might all bark at once.

Thorpe said it is good for the shelter to have the money to fall back on. "It's hard to get grants with the economy the way it is," she said. "There's money out there, but it takes a long time to apply and to find

The decision to sell the land was made, Rodgers said, before the board discovered in August that $11,000 of the shelters' savings had been stolen. That wasn't really a factor, she said.

How to adopt a pet

Anyone who is interested in Rodgers said, they should check adopting a pet can call the shelter with the shelter or with the animal at 899-6464, says Sandy Rodgers control officer at 899-4575. of the Northwest Kansas Animal

The tag can save them except two dogs that were deemed from having a dog taken to the too vicious. She said the shelter only rejects animals that are too vicious or too sick to take care of, but that may change if they get too many.

Right now, Thorpe said, the shelter can't take all the animals people bring in that they just don't want to take care of anymore. There's a waiting list for those giving away their pets, she said.

The shelter could never adopt out dog food for the shelter. all of its pets to people in Goodland, Rodgers added, so they network with others to adopt out pets in other communities. Some of the animals' pictures and descriptions are on other shelters' web sites, she said, but the shelter would like to have its own web site someday.

Anyone with a pet should take in it.

The shelter has taken all of the care of it, she said, and be sure it gets pound, Thorpe said.

> People can help save animals, Rodgers said, by cutting the weight circles off of Purina dog food bags and turning them into the shelter. The circle is at the top of the bag on the side and is the proof of purchase, she said, not the bar code.

The circles can be turned in, Rodgers said, for a discount off of

Another way people can help, she said, is by volunteering to care for the animals or to help with a fund

Some board members are trying to organize a golf benefit in May, she said. Golfers are needed to help organize the tournament and to play

CARACAS, Venezuela — Opponents of President Hugo Chavez threatened round-the-clock protests if the Supreme Court rules against a referendum on Chavez's rule. As their general strike dragged into its seventh week, a group of regional leaders agreed to help seek a reso-

Opposition leaders in November presented Venezuelan election authorities a petition with 2 million signatures demanding a Feb. 2 plebiscite. The referendum is nonbinding, but strike leaders believe Chavez, who was elected in 1998 and re-elected in 2000, would be so embarrassed by its outcome he would voluntarily step down.

"There will be no other recourse than taking the streets, remaining in the streets 24 hours a day," if the court rules against the referendum, opposition governor Enrique Mendoza said on Wednesday.

Chavez, who was in Quito, Ecuador on Wednesday for the inauguration of President Lucio Gutierrez, has called on high court magistrates to reject the referendum as unconstitutional.
