Dewey cattle got loose, caused complaints

By Evelyn Ward

Sherman County Historical Society

May 12, 1903: Complaint Against Dewey — Farmers in North Part of County Say They Are Being Imposed Upon. Complaints are being made of the ways of the Dewey Cattle company in the north part of this county. The company recently turned loose 1,200 head of cattle near the Rickman & Thomas Ranch. They ranged at will and overran a school section leased by Rickman & Thomas. Another herd of 600 was brought to the Vassar place, bought by another company. Hanford Sherrod lives nearby. The cattle drifted to his place, mixed with his cattle and ate up considerable stuff.

When the cowboys were brought to task about this reckless ranging of the herds, they said they had orders to let them range at pleasure, and when a cow dropped a calf, to brand it — that was all.

One of the employees of the Deweys said they had orders to shoot the farmers' dogs. The cowboys tote around guns and make a display of firearms, even sitting at their meals with six-shooters on.

today in history

This is very distasteful in civilized people who have a high regard for the law, and the relics of barbarism should be done away with as far as possible.

The council ordered a notice published against riding on the sidewalks with bicycles and driving teams and wagons over the city sidewalks.

May 14, 1903: Money for Houses — If all parties wishing to build residences and having two or three hundred dollars to put into the house and all parties wanting to make loans of several hundred dollars on residence property will report to the Commercial club, it will assist materially in getting the building under headway. C.M. Millisack, President. W.S. Coleman, Secretary.

May 15, 1903: Hail Storm at Kanorado — Chunks of Ice as Big as Hen's Eggs Fall Hard and Fast — An old fashioned hail storm was experienced at Kanorado Sunday. The story of what happened is true, but it sounds more like a far fetched piece of fiction or a fable out of the orient. The hail broke out all of the window glass in the south side of buildings in the town. J.M. Leonard; his wife; little daughter, 11 years old; and a son, six years old, were only about half way home when the storm struck them. The family lives about a mile and a half east of the city. Placing his wife and children on the sheltered side, they trudged on. The rim of his hat was punched full of holes. The crown was in better condition than the rim. That is because his head was in it, but the hail did not care much either way, for where they didn't go through, they left lumps on his head as large as English walnuts. The boy received an ugly bruise on one of his hands as he was clinging to his mother. The little girls had many black and blue spots on her body,
