How low should you go when mowing?

The question often comes up whether it is good to mow lower in the spring. The answer is “Yes” and “No.”

It doesn't hurt to mow lower than normal the first mowing or two. As a matter of fact, it can actually speed up green-up by removing old, dead grass and allowing the soil to warm up faster.

However, the mowing height should be raised to normal after the first or second cutting so that crabgrass is not encouraged. Crabgrass seed must have light to germinate, lated on upright-growing grasses such as tall fescue and Kentucky bluegrass. The higher the height of and a high mowing height will shade the soil.

Also, the root depth and mowing height are related on upright-growing grasses cut, the deeper the root system. A deeper root system means a more drought-resistant turf.

So, how low should you go on the first cutting? On tall fescue and Kentucky bluegrass, you should mow at about 1 to 1 1/2 inches.

Be careful you don't go so low that you scalp the turf. Normal mowing height for Kentucky bluegrass is 2 to 3 inches and for tall fescue is 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 inches.

Artist to display watercolors, oils, pastels at center

Marcia Streepy of Shawnee will display watercolors, oils, acrylics and pastels at Carnegie Arts Center in June. Her show will open with a reception from 1-3 p.m. Sunday.

Streepy's first art teachers were her parents, Pat and Charles Potucek, formerly of Tribune. Her mother inspired her through her own art, and he father taught her how to sell her work and to believe in herself.

A career in nursing provided Streepy the income to raise her two daughters with her husband Shawn, but she continued to study art throughout her life.

Streepy took classes at the University of Kansas and watercolor classes from Joan Voth at Washburn University. She started painting with Frank Szas, Charles Stegner and Philomine Bennet and eventually started showing her art in exhibitions and art fairs.

Streepy started entering national and international juried art exhibitions in 1996 and has been featured in the Kansas Artists Postcard series. The New York Art Center, New Orleans World Trade Center and Sprint collect her paintings.

Streepy said she enjoys covering blank paper or canvas with her work.

“Pure enjoyment is watching the paint or pastels fill a blank sheet of paper or canvas with color harmony, bold strokes and just the right amount of light and dark values,” she said.
