Special congratulations to new Kanorado 'team'

Deb Fahey and Susan Adams (above) completed their emergency medical training in May, and are now manning the Kanorado ambulance that is housed in that city. Fahey and Adams (below) were in Goodland recently to check out the inventory of the ambulance and to make sure all the equipment was in order. The ambulance is part of the hospital ambulance service, and covers the part of the county west of Ruleton.

Kanorado ambulance now in service

Two Kanorado citizens completed emergency medical technician training in May, and they are now manning the ambulance housed in that city.

Deb Fahey and Susan Adams spent eight months going to classes, did the required 29 hours of clinical practice and passed the state exam to get their certificates.

With the help of Jerry Webber a first responder, they are able to respond to emergency calls in the Kanorado area. Webber became a first responder in 1992 after attending about four months of classes and passing a state exam.

The new team had their first run on May 18 south of Kanorado.

It is good to have an ambulance back in Kanorado, Webber said.

"I hope others decide to join our efforts to make a difference," he added.

"If we can make one minute difference in being able to help someone, it makes it all worthwhile," Adams said. "I enjoy helping people."

The Kanorado ambulance covers the western part of Sherman County from west of Ruleton to the state line.

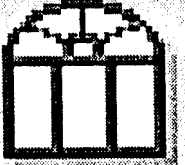

Bruce Gleason, head of the county ambulance service, said anyone interested in becoming part of the emergency medical service can call 899-3629.
