The Flatlander Photo Exhibit drew 250 people into Carnegie Arts Center in the second half of September, and eight winners received gift certificates and film.

The voting was close, said Director Tina Goodwin. Some of the winners were decided by only one vote. Though there were over 100 entries, she said, everyone got at least one vote.

Of the 250 viewers of the exhibit, Goodwin said, 75 went to the center during the Flatlander Fall Festival.

First place went to Chelsea Sheldon, second to Dennis Saint, third to Sammie Mills and fourth to Nancy Farris. Four youth awards went to Brittney Redlin, Megan Leonard, Kade Sheldon and T.J. Freeman.

Wal-Mart and the arts center supplied gift certificates and film for the winners, Goodwin said.

The director said she was pleased with the show and that she is looking forward to a good turnout next year. She said several people have told her they are planning to enter next year.
