

Future teachers visit Garden City's school district

By Lonnie Phifer
Future Teachers President
 Members of the Colby Community College Future Teachers' Organization toured the Garden City School District recently.

Eleven future teachers, with advisor Carolyn May, visited the Garden City High School, where they viewed classrooms and were shown a demonstration of the "Smartboard" teaching tool that Garden City uses in their English classes.

Next, the group went to Victor Ornelas Elementary School, where they toured classrooms and talked with some of the students. The next stop was Bernadine Sitts Intermediate Center, where members visited technical classrooms and were told how teachers prepare their students for a technological career path.

After lunch, the students went to the Teacher's Resource Center, which was the highlight of the trip for many. Students were allowed to make materials that they will be able to use in their own classrooms and learned exactly what a resource center does for in a school district. The Future Teachers take two field trips each year at no charge for members. The next trip will be a two-day field trip to Topeka early in the spring semester. The group meets at 6:30 p.m. the first Tuesday of every month in the Bedker Memorial Complex.
