Colby Community College President Lynn Kreider visited Aaron and Kristin Mann and New Year's baby Hayden ReNae at Colby Medical and Surgical Center. Kreider gave the couple a two-year scholarship for Hayden when she is ready to begin college. Colby Community College photo.

A Goodland couple's granddaughter was the first baby of the year at Citizens Medical Center in Colby, and when the time comes, her parents say, she'll continue her family's tradition of attending Colby Community College.

The early arrival for New Year's baby Hayden ReNae Mann brought some welcome news for her parents, Kristin and Aaron Mann, as she was the first baby of the year delivered at the hospital.

Her mother said Hayden's due date was Jan. 9, but she was born at 7:48 p.m. Monday, Jan. 1, 2007, weighing 7 pounds, 1 ounce.

Her maternal grandparents are Tim and Kelly Hawkins of Goodland. Paternal grandparents are Don and Evelyn Martin of Colby and the late Craig Mann of Goodland. Darrel and Sharon Mann of Goodland are her great-grandparents.

"We are pleased to offer Hayden a full scholarship to include tuition, fees and books for two years when she is ready to begin college," said President Lynn Kreider. "Both Hayden's parents attended CCC, and it is especially gratifying that she will be able to continue the family tradition."

It was a quick labor and easy delivery, Hayden's mother said; everything turned out well, and the scholarship offer is appreciated.

Irrigation scheduling helps yields

Irrigation scheduling helps farmers maximize yields and reduce water and energy use.

Many may be familiar with KanSched, an irrigation scheduling tool from Kansas State University that determines when and how much irrigation water to apply.

KanSched, developed by irrigation specialists at Kansas State University, is tailored to Kansas crops and growing conditions.

Irrigation scheduling using evapotranspiration values is much like checkbook accounting. In this case, soil water, rather than money, is the valued commodity. The debit is crop water use, while credits are rainfall and irrigation.

"The major goal of the 'accounting procedure' is to help the producer keep the amount of water in reserve above a minimum acceptable level to prevent water stress to the growing crop," said Dan

An improved version called KanSched2 features a user-friendly spread sheet-based program that can be learned quickly and used easily.

The new features include a way to account for cutting cycles in alfalfa, an irrigation forecast (five days into the future), irrigation fuel-cost accounting and a water record page for individual fields. Pull-down menus are included throughout the program for easy navigation.

KanSched2 was developed by Farmers who have the original KanSched are likely to find KanSched2 familiar and should have little or no difficulty adapting, they said.

Once it is time to enter data for the new year, it can be entered without creating a new field or deleting the old data. Contact your county K-State Extension Office for information.
