Dale Schields, hospital foundation director and director of human services, said 46 teams competed, which was eight more than last year. He said with the money from the benefit auction and the golf tournament the total raised this year appears to be higher than the $140,000 gross total from last year.

He said the higher number of teams did slow down the day a bit, but everyone seemed to have a good time. He said the heat in the afternoon had some taking refuge in the air conditioning.

Fred Stasser came to the commissioners in May and asked about buying a piece of right of way to build an access road to his property because he has a hard time getting into his farm during the winter because of snow drifts.

Stasser offered $225 for a piece of land he estimates to be about 1.12 acres. He said he has asked a sur-
