ness was getting sort of crowded," Mickey said. "Our parents had been driving trucks for years, and we felt there was nothing on the truck market for those who really spend most of their lives in the cab of a truck.

"This was an idea we had to bring a custom-built truck to the market.

We don't expect to sell a huge number of these, but think there is enough interest to keep us busy."

Larson said he remembers bringing one of the custom cars through Goodland about 10 years ago with the Power Rod Run cross country car race, and stopping to see his relatives.
