

Memory tree raises money for Hospice

The Hospice Memory Tree is on display at the First National Bank in Goodland and gives people a chance to remember loved ones who are no longer living. Memories can be turned into a gift by placing an ornament on the tree. The gift can be given in honor or memory of a loved one, the person doesn't have to be a Hospice patient.

The gift can be any amount. "These thoughtful donations allow us to better serve our patients by providing services not covered under the hospice benefit. These gifts also help defray the costs for patients in the Hospice program who do not have a hospice benefit. All proceeds truly benefit our hospice," Sandy Kuhlman, Executive Director of Hospice Services. This project involves many of our hospice volunteers along with community members. There are also trees in the main hospice office in Phillipsburg and at the office in Colby. According to Kuhlman, "Hospice is care and support as well as a philosophy that encourages the continuation of a meaningful life in the presence of a terminal illness. Care is provided not only to the patients, but to their loved ones as well. We provide care in an interdisciplinary team approach to meet their physical, emotional and spiritual needs." Hospice Services also has bereavement materials available. Contact (800) 315-5122 for questions.

First National Bank employee Susan Johnson straightens an ornament on the Hospice Memory Tree. The trees raises money to provide services to patients not covered by insurance.
