

High winds cause building damage

High winds whipped across the northwest part of the state over the weekend and continued Monday morning causing some minor damage to the Precision Hearing office on Main Ave. The National Weather Service office reported the winds were blowing around 50 mph, with the highest recorded gust of 59 mph coming at 11 a.m. The winds were expected to subside with the sunset. The forecast has a chance of snow for the area on Wednesday with skies clearing later in the week.
