Leadership program celebrates 20 years

The Kansas Agriculture and Rural Leadership program celebrated it 20th anniversary at a benefit in Garden City with alumni, current participants, donors and special guests.

President Jack Lindquist said the curriculum has evolved and adapted over the last 20 years to the changing trends and challenges of the agricultural industry and rural Kansas.

A new addition is a graduate program, which offers continuing educational experiences for alumni and their guests.

“KARL is now a lifelong educational and enrichment experience,” Lindquist said. “We’ve already had an entrepreneur’s workshop this past April and a recent inaugural study tour to Ireland drew a full group of participants.”

This winter, the group will hold a summit to address enhancing economic literacy. In Addition, an intrastate domestic tour will be held next year.

“The graduates and their guests loved the experience in Ireland, and every single one is ready to sign up for the next travel experience,” Lindquist added.

The groups’ basic two-year program offers intensive study, training and travel for future leaders in agriculture and rural communities, financed by donations, said co-founder Barry Flinchbaugh, K-State Research and Extension professor of agricultural economics.

The alumni program is a self-funded “pay-as-you-go” component, so no expenses are drawn from the money donated for the two-year program, Flinchbaugh noted.

To learn about the program as a prospective donor or applicant for Class XI (2011-2013) visit www.ksre.ksu.edu/karl/.

The store is accepting all types of donations but please call to set up a time to drop off your donation.
