The entries at the talent show on Saturday varied from bands, individuals singing, a stick and string game called Diablo and a Japanese dance. The talent show was hosted by the Carnegie Arts Center after the scruffy dog contest on Saturday at the Flatlander Festival.

A fourth grader Demi Mitchek was chosen overall winner by the audience on Sunday at Picknic-n-the Park. She sang "Rocky Top," "Would You Like to Swing on a Star" and "Ma! He's Making Eyes at Me." She was also the first place winner in the pre-teen division on Saturday.

Second place winner in the pre-teen division was Wince Hendrich doing Diablo and in third place singing was Anna Furguson. Shaley Justice also competed in the pre-teen division.

The winner in the teen division was the mixed rock band Leaving Abigail with members Caleb Fugleberg, Garrett Geist, J.J. Farris and Parker Sieck.

The winners in the adult division were Charlie Baker in first, in second Vanessa James and in third Aaron Thompson. Also competing were Dustin Jones and the Group, Joseph Eli, Lucas Medrano and Shelby Estes doing a Japanese dance.

First place winners in each division won $100, second $50 and third $25.
