County mowing to start soon

By Tom Betz

nt.betz@nwkansas.com

Weed mowing along Sherman County roads should begin next week with a combination of efforts by county employees and an independent contractor the county commissioners decided on Tuesday morning.

The commissioners decided to buy two tractors and three mowers from Darrell Schrader for $59,000 and then asked Schrader if he would lease the county a third tractor and have him do mowing with the disc mower the county had purchased.

The commissioners agreed to allow county road and bridge employees to work on mowing using the two tractors and 15-foot batwing mowers to do the rural intersections and other places where needed.

Schrader said he was willing to mow for the county, and said he could be ready to go in a short time. The commissioners agreed to pay Schrader $20 an hour for mowing and $25 an hour for his tractor. The county agreed to furnish the fuel for the tractor, and will pickup Schrader at the end of the day and take him back to his vehicle.

Butch Vandiver, public works manager, said he had looked at the tractors and mowers Schrader had given the county a bid on and felt they were in good shape to get started by next week.

Sherman County farmers Keith and Brian Coon were at the meeting to say they wanted to see the county begin some mowing.

"The roads are getting bad," Brian Coon said, "and we are here to straighten out the rumors we have heard."

Keith Coon said they had heard a rumor that the county was going to do one mowing and that Schrader did not bid on doing any mowing.

Commissioner Cynthia Strnad said the county has been concentrating on spraying the shoulders since spring, and were working on a way to begin mowing the roads.

"We are here about living in the country," Brian Coon said. "The way the roads are with a three inch drift of snow we will not be able to get to town. The weeds are between five and seven foot tall, and in cases they are taller than me."

To emphasize his point Brian Coon showed the commissioners photos of him standing in front of weeds that were taller than him on a road near his house.

Commissioner Larry Enfield said the county is going to be mowing, and was planning to make a decision about how that would happen at that meeting.

"We are asking you to make a decision to get the roads mowed and cleared up," Brian Coon said. "I saw two large bucks on the road and slowed down, but they immediately disappeared when they hit the ditch."

Keith Coon said with the corn harvest coming up the county could have a problem. He said in some cases one pass may not be enough, and it could take two passes.

Enfield said the commissioners have been working on this, and have talked to Schrader

Tri-State Royal celebrates 50th year

By Pat Schiefen

pjschiefen@nwkansas.com

The Tri-State Royal Champion of Champions on Saturday afternoon finished off the week of the Northwest Kansas District Free Fair at Goodland.

The Tri-State Royal celebrated its 50th year with special presentations and introductions at the beginning of the show.

The show was started by Wilmont Price and family in 1962. Dale and Zona Price took over after his father, Wilmont, quit. Dale and Zona turned the event over to Ron and Marsha Schilling about 20 years ago.

There is no entry fee but animal entries must be either the grand champion or reserve grand champion beef, sheep, swine or goat from a county fair in Kansas, Colorado or Nebraska, organizer Ron Schilling said.

The first show, Ron Schilling said, had four steers. They were from Sherman, Thomas, Cheyenne and Kit Carson counties.

This year more than 60 entries were from 29 counties in Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado.

Now the names of the Tri-State Royal winners are on special boards on the wall of the ag barn, and Schilling said some of the young people today are the second or third generation to participate in the event.

This year Champions and Reserve Champions from Sherman County who participated included Hannah Dechant who was the Reserve Champion in Sheep Conformation.

were in the Old Pro sheep division, and Dechant was in the Showmanship division.

In Goat Showmanship Jason Cowan represented Sherman County, and he was in the Goat Conformation division.

In the Swine Showmanship Laci Cowan and Evan Peter represented

Sherman County. Cowan and Garrett Taylor represented Sherman County in the Swine Conformation division.

In the Beef Showmanship Libbi Loos represented Sherman County, and she was in the Beef Conformation division.

Sponsors for the event include
