Salt in your teeth? That’s the taste of the hay that will be used to feed the Martha Stewart Reserve’s Native American horses. Before the horses can be moved to their new home at the Martha Stewart Reserve, the hay will first be subjected to a series of tests to ensure its quality and safety. Once approved, the hay will be delivered to the reserve, where it will be fed to the horses to help them transition to their new environment.

A new Seward County Veterans Memorial dedicated to the service of living and deceased veterans was unveiled Thursday afternoon at the Seward County Community College.

The memorial, located on the SCCC campus, is a permanent tribute to the service and sacrifice of the county’s veterans. It features a flagpole, a eternal flame, a bench and a peaceful garden setting.

The event included a ceremony with speakers from various organizations, as well as a performance by the SCCC Magnet Band. Attendees were invited to place a wreath at the base of the flagpole in honor of fallen service members.

The Seward County Veterans Memorial project was the result of a partnership between SCCC, the Seward County Veterans Association and the Seward County Commission.

Seward County Commission Chair Darrell Golden and SCCC Chancellor Dr. Ray Wesselman spoke at the event, along with veterans and community members who shared their stories of service.

The new memorial will serve as a reminder of the sacrifices made by those who have served our country and as a place for residents to gather and pay their respects.

The event concluded with a short ceremony in the Lugar Room of the SCCC Campus Center, where attendees were invited to sign a guestbook in honor of the fallen service members.

The Seward County Veterans Memorial is located on the campus of Seward County Community College, just north of the main entrance. It is open to the public and can be visited at any time.

— David R. Singletary

Hays Fly-In to feature Amelia Earhart on Saturday

Kansas students to our nation's capital

The Youth Tour was inspired by the famous pilot Amelia Earhart who disappeared over the ocean near New Guinea in 1937. The tour gives four high school students from across the state a chance to learn about American government and experience national pride.

The tour began in March with a trip to Washington, D.C., where the students had the opportunity to visit memorials, museums and congressional offices. They also attended a special event at the National Air and Space Museum, where they learned about Earhart's accomplishments and her impact on aviation history.

The students then traveled to several other cities across the country, including Las Vegas, Chicago and New York. Each stop was designed to provide a unique learning experience and to expose the students to different aspects of American culture.

The tour culminated in a trip to the Goodland Airport, where the students had the chance to meet with local officials and learn about the history of aviation in Kansas.

The Youth Tour is an annual event that is sponsored by the Kansas State Department of Education and the Kansas Congressional Delegation. It is open to students from around the state and is designed to provide a valuable learning experience.

— John H. Robinson

Brotherly love and respect as Bees with the New Breed

As a member of the Masonic Brethren, Thomas Jefferson was known for his devotion to brotherly love and respect as Bees with the New Breed. In a statement, he expressed his belief that the Masonic Lodge was an organization that promoted these values.

Jefferson wrote, “I have always considered the Masonic Lodge as a place where men of good character could come together to promote brotherly love and respect. The Lodge is a place where we can learn to value our differences and work together to build a stronger community.”

The Masonic Lodge is an organization that was founded in the 18th century and has been a significant influence on American society. The Lodge is open to men of all backgrounds and beliefs, and membership is based on the principles of brotherly love, benevolence, charity and truth.

Brewster student flies to National Great Planes Air Show

TOPEKA – Brewster student Rose Koggie April 14, 1937. Earhart is waiting to know each other and it was a great experience for everyone.”

The tour included a visit to the Air and Space Museum, where the students learned about Earhart’s historic flight across the Atlantic, the first person to solo the Atlantic, the first woman to fly non-stop across the Atlantic, and the first woman to fly alone around the world at the equator before she disappeared.

The students also had the opportunity to visit other landmarks in Kansas City, including the Liberty Memorial and the Kansas State Capitol.

The Youth Tour is an important opportunity for students to learn about American history and culture. It is open to students from all over the state and is designed to provide a valuable learning experience.

— John H. Robinson

The president of a Denver-based supermarket chain says the company is still committed to opening a store in Goodland, but the real goal is to “send to Washington, D.C., along with the local group began looking for community support to hold a fundraiser to send the store to the city.”

The store will be the 25th in the chain and the first in Kansas. It is expected to open in early 2015.

— John H. Robinson

The Youth Tour was inspired by the famous pilot Amelia Earhart who disappeared over the ocean near New Guinea in 1937. The tour gives four high school students from across the state a chance to learn about American government and experience national pride.

The tour began in March with a trip to Washington, D.C., where the students had the opportunity to visit memorials, museums and congressional offices. They also attended a special event at the National Air and Space Museum, where they learned about Earhart’s accomplishments and her impact on aviation history.

The students then traveled to several other cities across the country, including Las Vegas, Chicago and New York. Each stop was designed to provide a unique learning experience and to expose the students to different aspects of American culture.

The tour culminated in a trip to the Goodland Airport, where the students had the chance to meet with local officials and learn about the history of aviation in Kansas.

The Youth Tour is an annual event that is sponsored by the Kansas State Department of Education and the Kansas Congressional Delegation. It is open to students from around the state and is designed to provide a valuable learning experience.

— John H. Robinson

The president of a Denver-based supermarket chain says the company is still committed to opening a store in Goodland, but the real goal is to “send to Washington, D.C., along with the local group began looking for community support to hold a fundraiser to send the store to the city.”

The store will be the 25th in the chain and the first in Kansas. It is expected to open in early 2015.

— John H. Robinson

The Youth Tour was inspired by the famous pilot Amelia Earhart who disappeared over the ocean near New Guinea in 1937. The tour gives four high school students from across the state a chance to learn about American government and experience national pride.

The tour began in March with a trip to Washington, D.C., where the students had the opportunity to visit memorials, museums and congressional offices. They also attended a special event at the National Air and Space Museum, where they learned about Earhart’s accomplishments and her impact on aviation history.

The students then traveled to several other cities across the country, including Las Vegas, Chicago and New York. Each stop was designed to provide a unique learning experience and to expose the students to different aspects of American culture.

The tour culminated in a trip to the Goodland Airport, where the students had the chance to meet with local officials and learn about the history of aviation in Kansas.

The Youth Tour is an annual event that is sponsored by the Kansas State Department of Education and the Kansas Congressional Delegation. It is open to students from around the state and is designed to provide a valuable learning experience.

— John H. Robinson

The president of a Denver-based supermarket chain says the company is still committed to opening a store in Goodland, but the real goal is to “send to Washington, D.C., along with the local group began looking for community support to hold a fundraiser to send the store to the city.”

The store will be the 25th in the chain and the first in Kansas. It is expected to open in early 2015.

— John H. Robinson