Goodland black belt to try for world title

By Kevin Bottrell

kbottrell@nwkansas.com The Goodland taekwondo club had four students compete at the American Taekwondo Association Midwest District competition on June 8 in Kansas City, coming away with one champion, who now has a chance to compete at the World Tournament of Champions in July.

Lowell Coon, Connie Jo Johnson, Trent Coon and Jackson Daise competed in Districts. To compete at the district level, Johnson said, you have to be in the top 10 in the state, determined by tournaments throughout the year. There are four states in the district: Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma and Missouri. The competitors are broken up by age groups and belt ranks.

"It is a very tough quality of competition," Lowell Coon said.

Trent Coon and Daise both won "awesome competitors" awards; Johnson won third place in combat sparring and Lowell Coon won are three other instructors, Johnson, pion in sparring. With the win, he and four junior leaders, Daise, Trent qualifies to compete for the world Coon, Manten Crow and Aaron champion title in sparring. Coon Luckert. Johnson said junior leaders said he missed winning in forms by just two points.

Coon will compete in the Tournament of Champions at the association's World Conference on July 12 Tiny Tigers for kids aged 4 and 5; in Little Rock, Ark.

Lowell Coon, a second-degree black belt, said he started learning taekwondo in the 1990s, but stopped until his son Trent got him back into it. Trent Coon and Daise are junior instructors, who help teach younger students.

Trent Koon said the classes are a lot of fun.

'You have to work really hard," he said. "You have to know what's going on, when and how to do certain things, and there are a lot of rules."

The school owner is Wayne Luckert, a fourth-degree black belt. There

There are three age groups: the the Karate for Kids for ages 6 and 7; and the adult class. The classes meet two nights a week through most of the year, or three nights for higher ranked students. During the summer the classes are cut to once a week.

Johnson said they compete in four areas: forms, sparring, weapons forms and weapons sparring. Forms are a set of movements that students work on perfecting. Lowell Coon said they help with things like power and body posture and are a test of memory and discipline. There are nine color belts and nine degrees of black belt.

this week

The Legislature went nine days over it's usual 90-day schedule, mainly due to deadlocks on the budget.

"There was a week where we didn't do anything, just pointed fingers," he said.

Ostmeyer said he didn't anticipate the budget taking that long. One of the issues, he said, was the Senate wanted to allow more to be taken off the state sales tax while the House wanted to keep it the same. In the end they got only half of what they wanted.

While there is some income tax relief, Ostmeyer said, the budget is very tight.

"Unless the economy turns around, the governor's going to have to do something different next year," he said.

It was anticipated that this year's session would be less contentious

School district plans garage sale for old equipment

Goodland School Board members Mike Cochran and Teresa Sieck look at the kitchen items that the Goodland School District will sell at their garage sale Friday afternoon at North Elementary. The district will sell desks, old technology, books, shelves and other items.

pjschiefen@nwkansas.com The Goodland School Board met early on Monday at North Elementary School to see the items that the district will have in its garage sale.

The board looked at desks for teachers and students, old technology, old cameras and dark room equipment, shelving, kitchen items and old uniforms. The garage sale is from 2 to 6 p.m. today at North Elementary.

Superintendent Bill Biermann reported that removal of half of the bleachers from Max Jones Fieldhouse has been completed. The first half of the new bleachers was expected to arrive on July 8 and the second half a week later. The replacement should be done in three weeks. After completion there will be time to surface and rewax the floor before volleyball season.

He said the Black and Gold Booster Club had donated $3,500 to help finish track construction on pole vault and shot put areas.

Hutton Construction reported on the bids they had let out for the first part of the remodel project at West Elementary which includes the court yard and the new entries. They wanted the board to approve the bids for the steel and rebar and the bricks, which were either lower or in the budget. The other two bids they wanted to relet-dirt work and roofing-because they either had no bids or were over budget. Hutton said the important ones to accept now were the metal and brick because of the time needed to make the materials.

The construction company also asked the board if it could present the bids to a smaller committee than the whole board for approval because it was more efficient. The board said the current bid committee of Gary Slough, Diane Stiles and Jessica Cole would do that. The board reorganizes its committees in July.

There was also some discussion about adding a band room to square up the building at north and making that the storm shelter instead of the two class rooms in front of it. The board discussed it. They asked if there would be more architect fees to do that and they said no. Biermann said the additional cost would run about $40,000. Board member Teresa Sieck was concerned that the money might be needed at a later date for something else. The board took no formal action and will wait until the next board meeting to decide. The next meeting will be at 7 p.m. on Monday, June 24, at the administration building.

In other business the board:

• Paid $210,758 in bills.

Eureka company solves problems

By Ron Wilson

Director Huck Boyd National Institute for Rural Development at Kansas State University Rough seas off the western coast of Africa are making it difficult for a company to complete its work. Where would such a company turn for a solution? Would you believe, to a business in rural Kansas?

Matt Wilson (no relation to the author) is owner and founder of Invena Corporation in southeast Kansas. Matt grew up in Eureka, graduated from what is now Kansas State Salina and earned a mechanical engineering technology degree from Kansas State Manhattan.

"I had mentors, professors who made a great impression on me," Matt said. His corporate career took him to large companies in Allentown, Pa., and Dallas, Texas.

In 1997, Matt's father was diagnosed with colon cancer, so he moved back to Eureka and set up shop as an individual consultant with his mother Carma doing the books. They named the new business Invena, as a play on the word invention.

"That's what we do. We invent things," Matt said.

"We had a nice website and fancy business cards," he said. "We just never invited anybody to the corporate headquarters." That was because, for the first two years of operation, the corporate headquarters was the guest bedroom of his parent's house.

"I lived on the road," Matt said. Over time, the business evolved beyond consulting. "We would design something for a company, and they would say, 'Looks good. Just go ahead and get it built somewhere." So Invena staff started producing these products through subcontractors and eventually moved into doing the manufacturing themselves.

Matt bought the old train depot in Eureka and remodeled it into the corporate office. Since those first years, Matt has remarried, his mother Carma retired, and his father survived the bout with cancer. The company has grown to 35 employees with more than $10 million dollars in annual revenues.

is an engineering problem-solver. "There's a lot of opportunity," Matt said.

For example: After the earthquake in San Francisco, Calif., authorities required that all buildings and fixtures be earthquake-proof. Invena was called upon to do the required analysis for one company's wheel racks.

When an Argentina firm acquired a used cryogenic plant but found that the equipment manufacturer had gone out of business, Invena 'reverse-engineered" and built the necessary equipment. When a large customer in Houston had a big fasttrack design project, Invena set up a remote office at the customer's facility and quickly hired and trained a dozen CAD designers and engineers to execute it. Then Invena set up another remote office at the manufacturing plant in Tulsa to work with the folks on the shop floor.

Invena's customers are mostly Fortune 50 companies - not Fortune 500, Fortune 50 - so they are very successful.

'Eighty percent of our business is export," Matt said. He estimates that Invena has worked with customers in 54 countries.

That's quite remarkable for a company in a rural community like Eureka, population 2,940 people. Now, that's rural. For more information, go to www.invena.com.

What are the challenges of doing this international work in a small Kansas town? "We have to plan ahead - can't just run downtown if we need some unusual part," Matt said."But we love it here. I couldn't stand to move back to the city. We recruit people from the west coast where there is lots of crime and a high cost of living. When they come here, it's like a dream. Our rural location can work to our advantage."

Matt is now working with the Kansas State Department of Architecture on designs for downtown redevelopment in Eureka.

"If all I accomplish at the end of my days is to say I helped save my hometown, that's good enough," he said.

It's time to leave this platform off the shore of West Africa, where Invena helped solve the problem of the rough seas. We salute Matt Invena is known for design and Wilson and all the people of Invena precision fabrication of equipment for making a difference with their and controls for the energy and aero- entrepreneurial engineering. Kansans receive checks through settlement

Kansas borrowers who submitted a valid foreclosure payment claim through the National Mortgage Settlement will receive a check this month for approximately $1,480, Kansas Attorney General Derek Schmidt announced today.

More than $9 million will be distributed to 6,350 Kansans. Eligible borrowers had their mortgage serviced by one of the settlement's five participating mortgage servicers, lost their home to foreclosure between Jan. 1, 2008, and Dec. 31, 2011, and submitted a valid claim form. The participating servicers are Ally (formerly GMAC), Bank of America, Citi, JPMorgan Chase and Wells Fargo.

"These payments are in addition to mortgage assistance that already has been provided to more than 1,500 Kansans under terms of our settlement," said Schmidt,.

Schmidt said accepting the payment does not limit a borrower's ability to seek additional relief through a separate private ag.ks.gov.

lawsuit or other claims.

Nationally, the settlement administrator will mail valid-claim payments to borrowers listed in 962,278 loan records from June 10 through June 17. The payments come from a $1.5 billion pool of funds.

In February 2012, 49 state attorneys general, including Attorney General Schmidt, and the federal government announced the historic joint state-federal National Mortgage Settlement. Preliminary data shows that, prior to distribution of these checks, the servicers have provided more than $50 billion in direct settlement relief to borrowers nationwide, including $54.4 million to Kansans.

Borrowers with questions about their payment should call the settlement administrator at (866) 430-8358. Borrowers with general questions may call the Kansas Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division at (800) 432-2310 or visit www.

Governor doesn't get a blank check

Editorialists wailed and gnashed their teeth.

Kansas, they said, could become a dictatorship when Gov. Sam Brownbeck got his friends in control of both houses of the Legislature. He'd be able to pass any bill he wanted, and that would be too much power for any one man.

The governor's agenda would have "smooth sailing" during the 2013 session, one "expert" predicted.

Ha!

Anyone who thought that might happen hasn't spent much time around legislatures or politics. There's a dynamic that makes senators and representatives independent from the governor, and one house poles apart from the other, no matter who's in office.

In fact, that's what the Founding Fathers hoped for when they created our three-part government, featuring executive, judicial and legislative branches sharing power in a rough balance.

No branch completely trusts the other, each is jealous of its independence and all fear one of the others might become too powerful. Each house of a legislature eyes the other with suspicion, casting a wary eye on the other side.

That's just the way things are, even when all three are run by members of the same party and even when, as the governor and his allies did last fall, one group becomes more powerful and gangs up on another.

The governor and other conservatives campaigned successfully to oust liberal Republican senators who blocked many of Mr. Brownback's plans in the Senate. The old Senate leadership was ousted, replaced by a group closer to the governor's way of thinking. The Democrats, as usual in Kansas, were left with too few votes to count much.

So, this year, everyone expected great (or terrible) things from a new conservative alliance dominating the Statehouse. It never works that way, though.

The governor and many legislators saw eye to eye on many things, and his new allies in the Senate backed his plan to hold onto much of the remaining state spending while continuing to cut income taxes. Cuts would be paid for by retaining a 1-cent increase on the state sales tax passed under Gov. Mark Parkinson which otherwise would have expired next year.

Some reporters billed this as a $700-million tax increase, though tax rates were going down, not up. The House balked, though, mostly because conservatives there felt they have made a promise to let the sales tax go down.

The deadlock left the session incomplete as the 80-day goal for adjournment leaders had announced came and went. Soon, the 90-day limit set by law passed. Still no agreement.

Finally the houses compromised, shaving the sales tax to 6.15 percent and setting a schedule for further income-tax cuts. So much for the governor's unlimited power.

Will Kansas be better off for the changes pushed by Gov. Brownback? Only time will tell. But for sure, we're in no danger of him becoming some sort of all-powerful dictator. The system just won't allow that. - Steve Haynes

Lessons from the land

For Kansans June, July and August are months when some of us return to our roots and visit family in rural communities across the state. Some go back to help with wheat harvest, others go home to spend time visiting with friends they have grown up with. For all it's a time to reflect and remember.

Many of us are one or even two generations removed from the farm but we still remember fondly our early years. A friend once told me, remembering our early life on the farm is an important part of saying good-bye.

For me summertime meant harvest. It still does

I accompanied my dad and Uncle Bernie to the harvest fields when I was eight years old. I couldn't wait to see those monster machines chew through the golden waves of grain.

By the time I was a teenager, I was a regular member of the harvest crew. My responsibility was to level off the load in the back of one of our International Harvester trucks. In between unloading, a big handful of wheat – thoroughly chewed without swallowing - made a pretty big wad of gum. Not much flavor but one heck'uva chew.

Mom brought meals to the field in the family car and we had the chance to eat her wonderful home cooking while sitting on the tailgate of cylinders.

Other things I remember – looking down a badger's hole and seeing the critter looking back up at me – learning to hunt the wily ring-neck pheasant with our Irish setter, Red, something I still enjoy today – looking to the westward sky and watching the sun paint a masterpiece at the close of day – listening to the melodious meadowlark – darting through the summer grass during hot summer nights and catching fireflies to make a lantern in one of Mom's empty Mason jars.

Dad always watched the weather from our picture window on the west side of our house. You could easily see the Menlo elevator nine miles to the west across the pancake-flat High Plains prairie. I'd help him watch, hope and pray that parched land would receive rain and crop-crushing storms would somehow skip our land.

Without question the greatest lesson we can learn from the land is hope. Crops and a bountiful harvest are never guaranteed. love and learn from their land. Those of us who Drought always threatened my dad's crops. started helping dad one-way plow our summer Too much rain meant harvest delays or crop- we spent there. a field of wheat in minutes.

The summer of my junior year at Sheridan Community High School, such a storm wiped out our wheat crop. Dad rode in the combine cab with me as we entered one of our fields a few days later. One round later we both looked back in the bin and saw less than a fourth of it filled with wheat. It should have been full half way through the field.

After we completed the first round, Dad told me to let him off and he left the field. As he walked away, I saw him dry his eyes. He couldn't stand to see the crop he'd work so hard to grow hailed into the ground.

Two and a half months later on Sept. 15-he always started wheat seeding then - we were out in our fields planting for the next year. He always had hope.

I learned at an early age that hope is not wishful thinking of harvest success. Rather. hope is the action of planning and planting seeds. For some, harvest may not occur every year, but the seeds of hope must be planted if there is even the thought of a next year's harvest.

There are many other memories I have of growing up on a farm, too numerous to mention in this column. As I continue to work with farmers, I am reminded that they continue to could not stay on the land, cherish the time

Remember when you just went to the store and bought shampoo?

We used Prell for years. It was green and good for your hair. The tube said so.

And just to be clear, I'm talking about my parents and my siblings here, not the family I raised. They grew up in a far different world.

Remember when you washed your hair, then combed it and let it dry?

If it didn't behave, you'd grab something like Vitalis or Brylcreem or some other kind of grease or goo and slicked it down. Or up. Depending on what was in style.

Life was simpler then. Just shampoo. Rinse. Repeat.

But I imagine that many of you out there do not understand what I'm talking about at all. Most of you probably grew up in the era of hydrating shampoos and nutrifying conditioner, or cream rinse, as we first called it.

Most of you probably don't even remember Prell, may it rest in peace. (OK, they still make the stuff, but Proctor and Gamble ditched it years ago. Just say it's no longer a market leader.)

It's been a long time since men discovered conditioner, still longer for women.

My hair is fine, and it's gotten finer as it's gotten grayer. Without conditioner, it just sticks out, levitated by the static it generates.

So let's just say the two-step shampoo-andconditioner regimen is here to stay for me.

But having complicated our lives, why do the manufacturers insist on selling shampoo and cream rinse in similar bottles. The print these days is so small, no one over age 32 can read it, to start with. But many of them make the shape and color of the bottles identical.

And then you find yourself in the (dimly lit) shampoo aisle, looking for a magnifier so you can read the bottles.

Maybe that's what happened to me last year. I bought several bottles of rinse and several shampoos of the brand I like. At least, that's what I thought I'd done.

I buy small shampoos and large conditioner, because you need a drop of the concentrated shampoo and a handful of conditioner to do the average head of hair.

I had finished off a bottle of conditioner, rinsed out the last drops and thrown it away.

awake - I noticed that the conditioner was a LOT more foamy than usual. I looked at the bottle. Shampoo. I'd been rinsing my hair with shampoo! Well, I thought it felt a little odd.

I went to the cupboard, and got a new, large bottle, put it in the shower. The next day, I washed my hair, then worked a handful cream rinse into it. It seemed a little foamier than the last bottle, but my hair looked OK when I combed it.

The next morning – maybe I was more when she went to get the conditioner. When she got home, she said, she found she had two conditioners and one shampoo. And when she took the shampoo back, she found that the stocker had put them on the shelf that way, alternating bottles of cream rinse and shampoo.

I checked the cupboard, and the other large bottle in there was conditioner, so I put it out to use. I asked Cynthia to get me a couple of bottles of conditioner next time she was at the store that carries it. Then I was called away on

Plant variety determines where seed is bought

By Kay Melia

The Gardener vkmelia@yahoo.com Someone asked me the other day where I bought my garden seed. My answer was that I normally buy my seed from J.W. Jung or Burpee. And my friend said "Why?" And I said that a lot of the reason for buying where I do was force of habit. I grew up in a family that nearly always ordered from Burpee in the 1940s, so, through the years, the Burpee name stayed with me. Then I discovered the Jung catalog and the largest part of my purchases went to them because their catalog was so well organized, and prices, while not the lowest, were less than some companies, including Burpees.

As I think back over that conversation, it occurred to me that the top priority for placing my seed order each year is not necessarily the price, or the beauty of the catalog. My first consideration is pany that sells the vaor flower that I have proven to myself to be the best producer. If Burpee doesn't offer Mirai sweet corn, and they don't, then I will order from Jung, who does. If Jung doesn't sell Northern Exposure tomato seed, then I'll buy from Burpee, who does. And so on.

Therefore, my seed purchases, which seem to average in the $75 range over the years, have always seed, variety trumps price every riety of the vegetable time! If I have to, I'll pay a little more to get what works best for me. You know what? I notice that many times in the seed catalog, that the price of my choice is less than the others on the page. The cost of a packet of Ambrosia cantaloupe, my favorite, costs about the same as the other varieties.

Then there is the question about buying seeds and plants from your hometown dealer. There again, the variety I prefer trumps the availability of any other consideration. I gone to the people who offer the raise nearly all my own plants. If I ing process if price is your main seed others. Or both.

FUN BY THE NUMBERS

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mindbending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
