Hospital assures patients of sanitized equipment

After an incident earlier this month at the Neosho Memorial Regional Medical Center in Chanute where more than 240 patients may have been exposed to hepatitis, HIV and other diseases because of improper scope sanitization, the Goodland Regional Medical Center is assuring patients that high standards of cleanliness and infection control are followed and maintained in all procedures including colonoscopies. The hospital issued a release last week, saying the surgery department recently added the new endoscopy equipment that helps physicians detect gastrointestinal diseases, such as colorectal cancer, at an earlier stage when treatments are most successful. Endoscopy systems enable physicians to look inside the human body to diagnose, detect and treat gastrointestinal diseases and other conditions. Along with the new equipment, the surgical staff also was trained and certified by the manufacturer on proper techniques for cleaning, disinfection and sterilization of the endoscopes. Special cleaning equipment, called a "Scope Buddy", is also used by the staff and annual in-services and competencies are completed to maintain the staff's skills and techniques. The new, third-generation endoscopy system boasts enhanced image quality, added brightness and several key technologies such as high definition television for superior clarity; next-generation Narrow Band Imaging for enhanced observation of mucosal tissue; and dual-focus capabilities that allow physicians to switch the depth of field from normal focus to near focus for more detailed observation of suspected lesions. These new technologies are designed to help physicians provide their patients with more accurate and earlier diagnoses. "The clarity on the new Olympus system is exceptional, helping me to more clearly detect

Is surveillance becoming routine?

A nationwide study by the American Civil Liberties Union reveals that the cops know just not whether you've been naughty or nice – but where you've been doing it.

Agencies, mostly city and county departments, are using license-tag scanners, cameras programmed to record licenses and their location, all day and all night. Located on a patrol car, on bridges or buildings, anywhere they can "see" traffic, these cameras are remarkably efficient.

Minneapolis, with just eight units, captured 4.9 million locations in the first eight months of last year. They got the mayor's car 41 times. At first, police treated the database as a public record. Anyone could come ask for a report on any tag. Later, they decided the information was "classified."

As more and more cameras appear, more agencies join the movement, more vehicles are logged, the information increasingly goes into regional data bases that can produce a remarkably detailed picture of our daily activities.

It is, the union says, "a single high-resolution image of our lives."

"There's just a fundamental question of whether we're going to live in a society where these dragnet surveillance systems become routine," said Catherine Crump, a staff lawyer with the organization.

The group says it wants police departments to delete information on all vehicles except those actually linked to a crime, but of course, that's part of the beauty of the system. Your car might not be linked to a crime today, but who knows when someone might want to know where you've been?

People have no expectation of privacy when driving or parked on a public street, one police official noted. And that's true enough. Departments have checked licenses and logged locations for years, but until now, it was a low-efficiency game.

And true enough, we're all tracking ourselves by carrying cell phones, global positioning devices and other electronic gear. We walk on streets surveilled by cameras and pass through security at the airport.

The question the study asks is, "Do we really need Big Brother watching our every move?"

Some will say, if you're not doing anything wrong, why worry? The government will reassure us that we have nothing to fear, the scanners are only to track the bad guys. But they said that about the Internal Revenue Service.

In our view, no agency needs to gather and store this kind of information. Government agencies of all types already have way too much data stored away on citizens already. And it's not just an innocent system designed to catch bad guys.

Information is power, and when "they" have enough, it could come to the point where the citizens are no longer in charge.

No one should have that kind of power. As citizens, we need to take a stand now, before it's too late. — Steve Haynes

Commissioners wrong on pit bulls

To the Editor:

With the Treyvon Martin, George Zimmerman trial concluded of course now the new thing now catching the eye of the Goodland residents is the new sanctions being leveled against these so called vicious dogs. Now pit bull owners have to register their pitbulls and it has many of our residents seeing red. I myself having raised several pitbulls in the past can honestly say the public opinion: the city's opinion about these dogs are entirely way off base and is fueled by ignorance and fear.

Most people see pitbulls as being an aggressive dog who are born and bred to fight. I have several people who will argue that logic along side me. It's not the dogs fault that they have been given a bad reputation. Yes just like any other breed of canine a pitbull can be dangerous, but if raised correctly a pitbull can also be the friendliest dog on earth.

I myself think that there should be a reconsideration on this new ordinance that was passed in the city of Goodland because not enough research was done before they decided on this matter. I know of a business owner who's pitbull sits at the front door of his business and greets everyone that comes in to the shop and would rather lick you to death than attack you. And I've been inside the home of a good friend who have 2 pitbulls who will lick you to death and run up and strive to get your attention more than attack you.

Yes there are a few who are truly ignorant and raised their dogs to be aggressive. But should everyone else pay for their stupidity and ignorance? Then, of course, the consequences that follow for those who don't register their dogs with the city of Goodland. Okay I can see fining someone for not registering their pitbulls but jail time over not registering? Isn't that just a little steep? I really do urge the city commissioners to reconsider this whole thing and do a little more background checking on the history of these supposed vicious animals.

readers

• to the editor

Truly it's not only mine but the opinion of most of the pitbull owners here in town that to just single out pitbulls as a vicious dog is discrimination against just that one breed. where there are other dogs that are just as vicious. It's all in the way they are brought up and from what I have seen of the pitbulls in town, I have no doubts that there won't be any illegal dog fights going on with these dogs in Goodland anytime soon and if there was what are they gonna do except lick each other to death? Pitbulls have a bad reputation and and it's their master's fault. I think the commissioners should go visit the homes of the pitbull owners here in town and see how they are being raised and not pass judgement off the back just because the dog barks at you. That's my opinion.

Now, if the commissioners already did this and still made their decision then they haven't dug deeper. What is there to lose in seeing that you were wrong about these "Vicious Dogs."

Lastly and I'll end this letter, how fair is it to ask the police officers and sheriff's deputies to enforce this? Are they to drive around looking for the pitbull owners and seeing if their dog is registered or not? Don't you think our law enforcement officers have enough on their plate with trying to get the drugs out of Goodland? We need to pick our battles a little more carefully and I think personally the city commissioners chose the wrong battle to pick cause there are a lot of residents who will not take this ruling lightly

Protecting rural non-profits

To the Editor,

Rural communities often rely on cooperatives and nonprofits to conduct community business, and their employees rely on pensions provided by these communities.

The pension plans used by rural cooperatives and nonprofits pose little risk of the employer failing to pay benefits, and were therefore granted temporary exemption from onerous regulations in the Pension Protection Act of 2006.

If Congress doesn't act, these exemptions will soon expire, meaning rural cooperatives and nonprofits would be unable to continue providing pension benefits on which many families rely.

So we acted. I led a bipartisan effort to introduce the Cooperative and Small Employer Charity Pension Flexibility Act. This commonsense legislation allows cooperatives and nonprofits to continue providing pension benefits without government intrusion and improves the system ensuring a more stable future for rural cooperative employees.

Kansas communities are conducting their business and providing for their employees. We don't want the federal government getting in the way.

A precision addiction

haynes

• open season

My husband measures everything.

Maybe it's a man thing. Have you every noticed how many measuring devices men keep in their garages, tool sheds and junk drawers? Yardsticks, tape measures and calibrated wrenches, saws and drills.

I realized that Steve had a measuring addiction when he started wearing his pedometer on vacation.

Now, I can understand measuring your steps when you go out for a walk to see how much exercise you are getting. But when you're headed for a beach in Mexico, not so much. Besides it always drives the TSA guys at airport security nuts, because he never remembers to take it off his belt.

Well, I suppose that in itself might be one benefit.

However, back to my theory that my husband is addicted to measuring things.

He has two rain gauges. One we keep on the porch to measure rain. That one is seldom used. The second is in the garden. It measures rain and the amount of water that goes on the garden. While that may seem a reasonable thing to want to know, we've been watering the garden the same amount for the last 20 years, and the gauge always reads the same unless he forgets to dump it or we accidentally get some rain.

He checks the weather channel almost every day to see what the temperatures will be for the next week. I mean, let's face it. If it's summer, it's going to be hot. If it's winter, it'll be cold. What are you going to do differently if it's 85 degrees out today or 95?

I caught him measuring the number of charcoal he was using for the barbecue grill the other night. I'll swear he was counting them out – not just pouring them in and eyeballing them for the right amount for eight steak sandwiches.

And we're not even going to go into the Garmin in the car, which can measure miles per hour, how long it'll take to get there and how much fuel you're using. He loves that thing.

He measures when he cooks, too.

Of course, we all measure when we cook.

Very few of us can come up with a cupful without a measuring cup, and it's important not to get too much or too little baking powder or baking soda in a recipe.

But there are a lot of things that just don't need a measuring cup or a spoon. Things like salt and pepper, onion and garlic.

I can measure a teaspoon of salt in the palm of my hand and eyeball a half cup of diced onion. Who cares if I'm an eighth of a cup off. It's onion. It's all good.

Not Steve. He's precise. He doesn't put too much or too little of anything into a recipe.

He's addicted, I tell you but as long as I can keep him cooking, I'm not going to start an intervention. I know when I have a good thing going.

abnormalities, even at their earliest stages," said Dr. Travis Daise.

Daise is one of the four providers at the hospital that regularly uses the system for procedures such as colonoscopies. The others are David Younger, M.D. and Douglas Van Marel, M.D. and Jeffrey D. Huston, M.D., a gastroenterologist.

Diagnosis at the earliest stages can improve treatment outcomes, reduce overall healthcare costs and improve the quality of life for patients. To aid in early detection, the American Cancer Society recommends that beginning at age 50, both men and women at average risk for developing colorectal cancer should be screened for colorectal cancer and polyps, and those with personal or family risk factors should be tested even earlier.

In addition to helping hospital physicians detect and diagnosis disease at an earlier stage, the new system should improve comfort for patients as well. It utilizes new technologies to better follow the contours in the colon, has improved sensitivity to a physician's movements and variable stiffness to meet the unique anatomical needs of the patient and capabilities for visualizing the scope's position inside the patient's body all of which deliver better control to the physician and help to improve comfort for the patient.

"The improved handling on the new scopes is particularly helpful in situations that require advanced endoscopic technique. It also makes the entire experience much easier on my patients," Younger said.

Additionally, the new endoscopy system is designed around system integration and workflow management to ease setup and reprocessing, manage patient data, communicate with hospital networks, and provide seamless technology integration to help optimize the flow of activity in the endoscopy suite and the hospital overall.

"With the acquisition of the system at our hospital, our goals are to improve the efficiency of our operation, enhance our diagnostic capabilities, and foremost, deliver world-class care to our patients. With this advanced technology, we may be able to provide our patients with more accurate diagnoses, shorten their procedure times, and improve their overall procedural experience," Van Marel said.

McCook, Neb., to have first drive-in movie in more than 30 years

For the first time in more than 30 years, the people of McCook, Neb., and the surrounding region will have an opportunity to view a drive-in movie from the comfort of their cars, pickups and SUVs.

The special outdoor showing will be Saturday, Aug. 10, on the south side of the Red Willow County Fairgrounds. A large, inflatable screen—10 yards tall and 15 yards wide—will be set up south of the grandstands for the showing of "Space Jam," starring Michael Jordan and Bugs Bunny, and "Footloose," the 1980s classic starring Kevin Bacon.

Entry gates will be set up on the south side of the fairgrounds near the West M

Street and Westridge Parkway intersection. Vehicles with show watchers are encouraged to come early to take their places in advance of the showing of "Space Jam" at 8:45 p.m. "This is just slightly before sundown, but it will still be dark enough for the show to start," said Gavin Harsh, the event organizer. The showing of "Footloose" will follow, with the starting time between 10:45 and 11 p.m.

Harsh, a 2013 graduate of McCook High School, came up with the idea for a drive-in movie as a way of saying thanks to the people of southwest Nebraska. The idea quickly caught on, with Gavin receiving encouragement and support from the Optimist Club and McCook business people.

In order to obtain a screen for the showing in McCook, Gavin made arrangements with Fun Flicks, a firm which specializes in outdoor showings throughout the U.S. A trip of 11 hours will be required to transport the outdoor screen from Dallas to McCook.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
