Veterans, flag fliers honored Monday

By Pat Schiefen

pjschiefen@nwkansas.com

The seating was filled except for the front row on Monday for the observance of Veterans Day at Goodland Veterans of Foreign Wars Hall. It is a traditionally a time set aside to remember the service and sacrifice of current and past members of the United States military.

The main speaker was Sherman County Sheriff Burton Pianalto. He talked about how the precious freedoms Americans enjoy have not been free and have been guarded and paid for with the blood of its men and women in the military. Pianalto said the sheriff's department is also a guardian of the Constitution and the county, protecting its citizens in their everyday life. He said his department has worked to be as transparent as possible to the electorate. He has members of the community on the interview committee for the new applicants for the department. He hopes to start an intern program for people interested in the field and an auxiliary of concerned citizens to be called upon when needed.

The winner of the Veterans of Foreign War Auxiliary's Voice of Democracy Ian Bonsall gave his speech on how the next generation can carry on the inheritance of democracy and freedom. As the local winner he will move into district and hopefully state and national competition.

Patriotic music was sung by Dani and Danny Mangus.

JoAnn Wahrman for the auxiliary recognized people for flying the Flag on a daily basis with a certificate. They included John Garcia, Tracy Hillmer, Doug Whitson, Wayne Aten, Tim Gittinger, Jim Mosbarger, Leo Townsend, Todd Trzcinski, the Finnell's, Ken Baum, Dale Goodwin, Douglas Gill, Bob Moyer, Jeremy Martin, Bud Perrey, Gilbert Taylor, Mark Acuff, Jim Alcorn, Gilbert Thomas, the Bandel's, Tim McGraff, Marshall Squires, Greg Cloyd, the

B. Smith's, Dave Branda, 519 East Fourth, 416 Broadway, 1209 Center, 607 E. First and 1532 Sherman. Gittinger won the drawing for a new flag.

Others participating in the ceremony were Dick Liess as the Master of Ceremony. The Veterans of Foreign War Color Guard placed and retrieved the colors. American Legion Service Officer Ken Baum gave the invocation. The V.F.W. commander Dennis Musil welcomed everyone to the ceremony. V.F.W. Chaplain Dr. Chet Ross led the closing prayer.

Debate continues on where to put students

The Goodland School Board had a long meeting on Monday night covering various subjects including the audit of the district's books by Adams, Brown, Beran and Ball of Colby and a continuing discussion of where the high school students will go while the high school is being remodeled.

A small number of junior parents have expressed some concern about the high school relocating to Central Elementary instead of North Elementary. It has been mentioned that the information supplied when the bond was promoted said they thought the current science and family and consumer science rooms at the high school could be used, said Superintendent Bill Biermann. Since the entire high school will be rewired and new heating and air conditioning installed it has become apparent that that is not possible. It would mean kids would have to go in and out of a construction zone and keeping a specific part of the building open for students would increase costs. If the high school moves to North there would be no lab facilities for those classes. If the students move to Central and with the sixth grade moving to North the labs at Grant could be used for science and family and consumer science.

Biermann said the labs would not be the greatest but at North there are no facilities for labs. He said he even looked into leasing modular labs that could be moved by North. Just the lease would cost $90,000 and the district would be responsible for the utility hook ups.

One of the other concerns was how much bussing there would be when the high school would move to either location. Biermann said that Central is closer and is centrally located between the high school and the junior high. To cut down on how many times students would need to move for classes the administrative team is thinking about going to a block schedule instead of the existing modified block schedule. On a block schedule each class is 90 minutes long and there are four classes a day versus seven or eight. The classes would alternate days. Biermann said that would only be for the one year.

Parking at both locations has been mentioned as a concern. Biermann said the board wanted him to see how many parking spaces would be needed and how many would be available. The Lilyana Bowden's Reading Is Fundamental book is being labeled by her teacher.

Head Start class has busy month

Sherman County Head Start had a very busy October. To start the busy month, they distributed the Reading Is Fundamental books. The Northwest Kansas Educational Center Head Start program received a grant from Macy's to purchase books for all of the students in the program. Each child had the opportunity to choose a book to begin or add to their home library.

Also, this month we had our school pictures taken and the next day we had our dental day. On October 4, each student had a dental exam and fluoride applied to their teeth. Dr. Terry Imel came to the classroom and completed dental exams for all the students. Rawlins County Dental also came to the classroom to apply the fluoride treatment to the kids' teeth. The kids enjoyed having their teeth "painted" with the favored fluoride.

Fire Prevention Week was in the month of October. For the week of October 7-11, the students learned about fire safety. We talked about "Stop, Drop and Roll," crawl under the smoke and so much more. During this week, the students dressed up like firefighters and pretended to fight fires during work time. The kids had a blast being firefighter! To conclude our week of fire safety, the Goodland Fire Department gave us a tour of the fire truck and the fire safety trailer. The kids loved the fire truck!

We are looking forward to the month of November. This month the parents and students are doing their annual fundraiser. This year the parents decided to do a Little Caesars Pizza Fundraiser. We don't have as many events planned for the month of November, but will continue to learn letters, numbers, colors and of course learn through playing with our friends!

If you are interested in the Head Start program, stop by the Head Start office at 823 W. 11 behind West Elementary.

Business makes truck vinyl wraps

By Ron Wilson

*Director
Huck Boyd National Institute for Rural Development at Kansas State University*

The radio station van drives down the street, looking like a moving billboard. The van has a large, attractive design covering it and boldly displaying the station's call letters. This van is displaying a vinyl wrap which was designed, produced and installed by a creative business in western Kansas.

Liz Sosa is manager of Inkt Graphics, a custom graphic design and vinyl application company. Inkt Graphics is a division of Western Motor Company in Garden City.

Liz grew up at the rural community of Hugoton, population 3,643 people. Now, that's rural.

She graduated from Garden City Community College and Fort Hays State University virtual college. She then served as director of the Learning Center at Garden City Community College and as Garden City's assessment coordinator for four years. She also taught non-credit college classes, as she continues doing today through Garden City's Business and Technical Institute. Then she had an opportunity to get closer to business.

"I've always been business-oriented," Liz said. In 2010, she was working for Finney County Economic Development when she was approached about becoming manager of a small business called Inkt Graphics. Ultimately, she took the job.

Inkt Graphics is a company that creates and produces designs to imprint or cover everything from autos to apparel. (Wow, that would be one big t-shirt!) No, those are two different things: apparel for people, and wraps for cars.

The apparel might include team shirts or t-shirts with custom art designs, for example. These are dyed using a process called sublimation in which the ink is embedded into the fabric.

The auto wraps are essentially sheets of specialized vinyl which can have custom designs imprinted on them and then adhered to a vehicle.

"It's like a giant sticker but it uses a more aggressive form of adhesive," Liz said. "The vinyl adheres to the clear coat of the car but doesn't damage it so that the wraps can ultimately be removed without residue."

These wraps are like a moving billboard, constantly on display. It's a great way to advertise. "Unlike an occasional radio or TV commercial, these wraps are on display 24-7, 365 days a year," Liz said.

The process begins with creation of a custom design to suit the customer. "We can take people's ideas to fruition," Liz said. As the company motto says, "You think it, we ink it."

"We do our own design, printing and installation," she said. "We do it all in-house."

Liz's job is to provide overall management of the business.

"We have lots of talented artists here," Liz said. "I'm not one of them!" she added with a smile. But the owner recognized that the business consisted of young, artistic people, so Liz would be a good fit to manage them.

The business continues to grow. Teams and businesses especially like to purchase the t-shirt apparel, and there is growing interest in wraps. Companies like to use them for display on their business fleets. One agribusiness had wraps installed onto the tailgates of the company's trucks. A heating and air conditioning company wanted the wraps so they could advertise while going to customers or while parked.

Because these are not permanent, they can be changed and updated.

"A local credit union has them changed annually as their promotions change," Liz said. "One year they might be promoting a special interest rate and the next they might be promoting car loans."

For more information, go to www.inktgraphics.com.

The radio station van drives down the street, looking like a moving billboard. The van has a vinyl wrap developed by Inkt Graphics which prominently displays the station's call letters.

"The logos are big enough that you can see it and tune in," Liz said. We salute Liz Sosa and the people of Inkt Graphics for making a difference with this innovative form of design and promotion. With that, it's a wrap.

But there's more. Liz Sosa wears several other hats. She is giving leadership to one of the longest standing, most traditional leadership development organizations in Kansas - but also to an innovative group of young rural leaders. We'll learn about that in next week's Kansas Profile.

Licenses for illegals not a bad thing

This may seem a strange thing to advocate, but Kansas should follow the lead of California and resume giving driver's licenses to "undocumented," or illegal, aliens living here.

Actually, California was not the first state to start issuing licenses to noncitizens, only the 11th. Others include Oregon and our neighbor to the west, Colorado.

Why? First, having a license should allow illegals to get insurance again. Right now, thousands of these people, mostly hard-working folks with jobs, have to drive without insurance because they can't get a license.

Second, it will allow the same people to have a state-issued ID without qualifying them for welfare, medical aid or any other government programs. Most states issue a separate type of license for the undocumented, but at least they get into the system.

And finally, it could take the edge off a campaign to paint the Republican party as anti-minority. This is an issue that Republicans and Democrats should be able to agree on.

We are not talking about immigration "reform" here, or any sort of amnesty for illegal entry. Those are issues Congress will have to solve.

What we would be saying is that if people are going to drive here, they must follow American laws, register for an American driver's license and buy American insurance for their vehicles.

States can't enforce immigration laws anyway. They will have to leave the tough decisions to the feds.

Many Kansas police officials said it was a mistake to exclude this group from state-issued licenses because of the insurance problem and because it left them completely outside the system. That hasn't changed.

But the state Legislature got swept up in a wave of hysteria about illegal immigration and made a decision that causes more problems than it solves.

Many good, conservative Republicans, including farmers and their organizations, business people and others desperate for workers, know that immigrants usually come here only to work. Often, jobs can't be filled without hiring immigrants, and these people would not come here if we didn't have jobs. In fact, they did not come during the late, lamented Great Recession, when immigration numbers actually dropped.

We don't believe that illegals should be able to get any government benefits while here, including welfare, Medicaid, Social Security and the like. Even legal immigrants should not be allowed to come here just to get welfare.

But children, often U.S. citizens themselves, do need an education, and anyone who's driving here needs to have a license, proper training and basic insurance. It's to everyone's benefit to see that happen.

Gov. Sam Brownback and the Republican-dominated Legislature need to take a look at the problem and come up with a solution that includes making sure all drivers have a license and insurance. Everyone has a stake in that. — Steve Haynes

Dodging chairs on the highway

To say it was a surprise would be a gross understatement.

But I've got to say, my reactions must have been pretty quick.

I was on the way home from Colby the other night, following a pickup in the dark up the "long flat" south of Oberlin on U.S. 83. Movement caught my eye, and I looked ahead just as the wind lifted what I thought was a single chair out of the pickup's bed.

I managed to dodge into the (fortunately empty) southbound lane in time to avoid this object without any problem, which kind surprised me. Wasn't sure I was still that quick or steady, and the last thing you want to do is to roll the truck avoiding a deer — or a chair.

Since the thing had landed in the middle of my lane, I whipped around after the traffic cleared and went back to check for debris. Looked like the next guy behind me had not had time to dodge after I whipped around it.

I found not one, but two plastic lawn chairs, the kind you stack. The one I had seen, a beige one, had been knocked off the road and shattered into a dozen pieces. The second one, dark green, looked to be intact. When I picked it up,

steve haynes

• along the sappa

though, it had a broken arm.

I set the green chair on the shoulder in case the owner realized what had happened and came back to look for it.

When Cynthia, who was on the way home from Hoxie and only a couple of miles behind me, got home, she said, "Did you see the chair on the shoulder south of town?"

"You," I said, "don't know the half of it."

The next day, she told me she'd seen a pickup in town with a green chair in the back and figured it was the same one. We're not sure if the owner came back to find it, or if someone just claimed it as a prize for cleaning up the right of way, but with a little glue, it might be usable.

The whole thing gave me a sense of déjà vu, in reverse, I guess. Years ago, we were putting on a cooking show in Colorado and needed a stove. We borrowed one from an appliance dealer in the next town.

We were on the highway headed home in the company truck, a 3/4-ton pickup equipped with a flat bed and a four-foot wire cage. Figuring the stove wouldn't fall out, we'd failed to put the end gate, which we almost never used, on the bed.

We realized our folly when we passed a semi at high speed. Bam! That stove just flew out of there. I can't recall if anyone was close behind us, but I'd think that would take a couple of years off your life expectancy.

When we got back to what was left of the stove — it sort of exploded when it hit the shoulder — we just picked up the pieces and took it to the dump. The appliance guy thought it was pretty funny when I paid him.

The biggest thing I've seen come off a truck ahead of us was a bale of hay, and that was scary enough. It was one of the old, small ones, but still big enough to wreck a car. I'd shudder to think about one of the big ones they put up today coming off, but the way some people load them, I know it happens.

And I don't want to be there when it does, thank you.

President takes control over climate change

On Nov. 1, 2013, President Barack Obama, by executive order entitled "Preparing the United States for the impacts of climate change," decreed himself to be over climate control — this without a shred of constitutional authority. Executive Orders have the force and effect of law and only the Legislative Branch is empowered to make federal law (Art. I, Sec. I, Clause I). Moreover, Article II, which houses a president's power, does not list anything remotely similar to climate control regulation. As such the states alone have all non-delegated powers and unless they forfeit that power to him by way of an amendment, as per Article V, he is not only stealing Congress's power to make law but also the states' sole jurisdiction over climate regulation, if any.

The E.O., begins: "By the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and the laws of the United States of America, and in order to prepare the Nation for the impacts of climate change by undertaking actions to enhance climate preparedness and resilience, it is hereby ordered as follows." Then follows five pages of small print outlining the "actions" that will be. But there is no authority actually cited, as has been the practice with previous presidents, because there is none. He made it up.

The Order establishes a Task Force consisting of seven Democratic Governors and the Republican Governor of Guam together with 14 mayors, two county officers and two tribal representatives, also mostly Democrats. They are charged with working with state and local officials "to strengthen climate resilience," (a buzz word for more control of state and local functions) and helping local governments "make smart decisions." Smart decisions imply falling in line with, in this case, Democratic Party federal government thinking. Many of

from other pens

us remember the Environmental Protection Agency similarly created by a Richard Nixon executive order some 43 years ago and how it now influences a sixth of the economy. Government likes to grow.

By a mere stroke of a pen one man, with no authority to make rules for us, initiates a process to unleash mountains of new regulations on unsuspecting farmers, businesses, and property owners, as happened with the EPA, in this case dealing with droughts, flood control, carbon emission, wildfires, green space and who knows what else. Businesses will have to fill out a Climate Action Plan before they can proceed. Building codes will have to be updated. I see sweeping new changes to land use and resource policies. I see a further weakening, almost to non-existence, of state, county, and city jurisdiction and in turn the amplification of federal power over every person in the United States. One builder once told me that a third of the costs of a new home was compliance with EPA rules. Perhaps a similar amount will be needed to meet all the new mandatory climate guidelines.

But the biggest damage is what it does to the Constitution when the executive branch replaces Congress as the lead rule-making body. When Congressmen, because of loyalty to party rather than to the Constitution, excuse their president, as did Republicans under Nixon in 1970 and Democrats now under Barack Obama, become too weak to take back their power. When States no longer have the will to use the Doctrine of Nullification, as did their predecessors, in 1800, 1832, and in the 1850's to preserve federalism and the Tenth Amendment to the Constitution. When the Constitution is revered in name only, which is becoming common to both parties.

Of course, as with all federal programs, states, counties, and cities will be funded as they fall in line with "smart decisions." In 43 years from now will climate related rules and regulations, emanating from an unelected bureaucracy, dictate another one-sixth of the economy? The EPA precedent says yes.

The Founding Fathers' concept of separation of powers has been heavily altered between these two imperialistic presidents — Nixon and Obama. The Constitution allowed only the Legislative Branch to make federal law. A law's review by 536 individuals (435 members of the House, 100 Senators and 1 President) served as a filter for bad law as only one bill in thirty survived to enactment. Congress must say no to this and any executive order that has the effect of making law. We must return to the Constitution with Congress alone making all federal law or, in time, we will lose the rest of our liberty.

Jury trial date set for murder suspect found in the basement of his home the evening of April 3, 2013, with injuries to his head. He was taken by ambulance to the hospital, and later pronounced dead. The penalty for that charge is 25 years to life in jail.

Windell also pled not guilty to two counts of theft, class A misdemeanors. One count was for silver coins that were valued at less than $1,000 that were taken from the Figgins home. The second count of theft was for Figgins' personal effects, valued at less than $1,000. The penalty, if found guilty, is up to 12 months of jail time for each count.

During the preliminary trial, the prosecution called two expert witnesses to testify to Figgins' cause of death. They called three additional witnesses to testify to the whereabouts of Windell on April 3. The defense did not call any witnesses.

Judge Scott Showalter said that Windell will be given a trial by a jury of her peers in Cheyenne County. Jury questionnaires were to be agreed upon by the prosecution and defense, and sent out as soon as possible.

Windell waived the right to a speedy trial in order to give her court appointed defense lawyer, Charles Peckham, more time to prepare. Peckham told Judge Showalter he felt the defense would be ready in the spring. Prosecutor for the state, Nicole Romine, Assistant Attorney General, agreed that it would be adequate time to prepare.

The trial is set to begin on April 21.

day Biermann counted cars he said there were 183 cars parked by the high school. Adding the space available he said there were 203 spots at North without parking in front of homes. At Central he counted 185 spots without students parking in Dependable Glass' lot or in front of S&T Communications or other businesses on Main. Having the students on Main could increase business for those serving breakfast or lunch.

The school board did not make a formal decision on where the high school would move. Board Member Teresa Sieck said she had about three parents contact her about the issue and suggested that Superintendent Biermann have a meeting with the junior parents.

The auditing firm gave the district's book the best opinion they gave. One concern that they found was that in the contract on the new bleachers for Max Jones there was no nondiscrimination clause in the contract. Biermann said the district has addressed that by putting that clause on all of their purchase orders.

A representative for Adams, Brown, Beran and Ball said the only other concern was that the district did not have $3.6 to $7.2 million in reserve for a three to six month cash reserve in case of delayed public funding.

The district paid $278,559 in bills.

Schedule eye examinations to catch retinopathy

During Diabetic Eye Disease Awareness Month in November, the American Society of Retina Specialists urges all adults to schedule a simple eye examination to check for the earliest signs of diabetic retinopathy.

According to the National Eye Institute, diabetic retinopathy is a leading cause of blindness in American adults, affecting an estimated 4.1 million over age 40. Diabetic retinopathy is a complication of diabetes that often goes unnoticed until vision is affected. It is caused by elevated blood sugar levels from diabetes damaging or blocking the small blood vessels that nourish the retina, the light-sensitive layer of tissue at the back of the eye that provides clear, sharp images.

As diabetic retinopathy cuts off this blood supply, vision is impaired. Symptoms include blurred or double vision, floaters, eye pain or pressure, or a shadow in the field of vision. If left untreated, it can lead to blindness.

"People who experience these symptoms should schedule an examination immediately," says society president and retina specialist John T. Thompson, MD, of Retina Specialists in Maryland. "Because anyone can develop diabetes, it is important for all adults - even those who live healthy lifestyles - to schedule an annual eye examination. With early detection, vision loss from this disease can be prevented."

During a routine eye examination, an ophthalmologist can see the earliest signs of the disease, long before vision is affected and, if diagnosed, refer the patient to a retina specialist.

A retina specialist is a highly trained physician who specializes in the treatment of diabetic retinopathy and other eye conditions and diseases. The retina specialist will begin a treatment regimen to prolong vision, slow the progression of the disease, and make living with it very manageable.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
